CONFUSING BEGINNING

Registration Starts It All

In the midst of the summer heat, students rushed to the Multi-Purpose room after a relaxing summer vacation to tackle the usual mass confusion while registering for their fall classes. According to most of the juniors and seniors, registration went smoothly with little problems. For sophomores, registration was a puzzling ordeal. "I had to revise my program several times, because many of the classes I chose were closed," exclaimed sophomore Ann Truong. Questions, frustration, and excitement faced these students, who were new and unaccustomed to the Gaucho world. With the help of the counselors, PTSA, Key Club, Keywannettes, and Jane Addams, most students successfully tackled the task of registration. Not necessarily the highlight of the summer, registration served its purpose: everyone who came was checked in.

WORK + FUN = SCHOOL

Here We Go Again

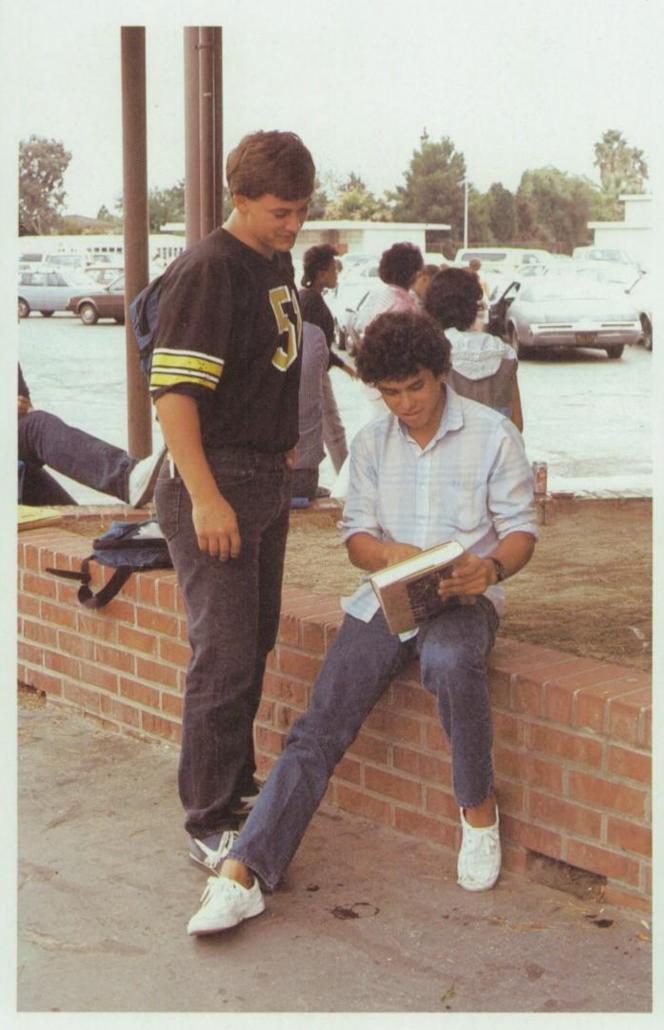

Just when it seemed the fun had begun, summer was over. Crowds of students gathered in the hallways and throughout the lunch benches, reuniting with all their old friends and comparing their summer stories and class schedules.

Throughout the second week of school, little yellow stickers were being sold for twelve dollars in exchange for free admission to home football games, discounts on dances, and much more.

Renewing old friendships, meeting new people, and catching up on the latest gossip were not the only concerns of the students. The first weeks of school were the hardest for some of them. Not only did they have to face the challenges of new lockers, new classes, and new teachers, but they also had to face the challenge of disciplining themselves to concentrate on their subjects. The time had come to face facts. School had begun.

"This locker better open!" exclaims junior Richard Bell, trying out his new locker combination.

Showing off his Laker book cover, Danny Perez and Billy Mercer discuss a jump shot.

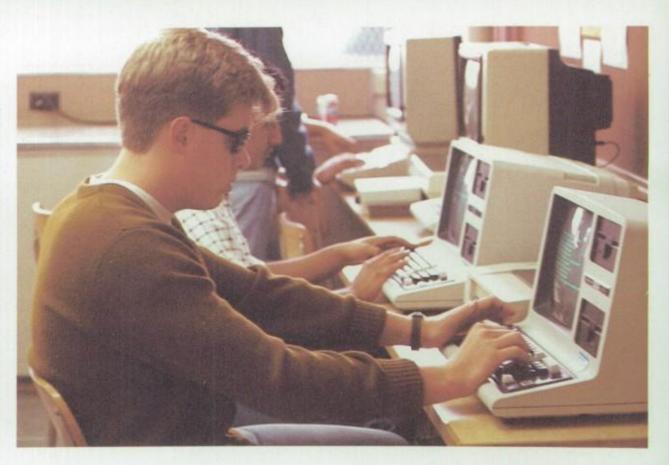

Nobody said life was easy, especially not the life of a student. Out of bed by six o'clock and in the classroom by eight, a student's day only got more hectic as the hours passed. With each tick of the clock, the homework piled up, and the list of tests grew longer. But just when it seemed as if the work would never end, something would always happen to ease the tension that had built up inside each student by the end of the day.

For some, this relief came from playing in afterschool sports. For others, it was found in one of the many other school activities and clubs.

To break the monotony of school, assemblies were presented throughout the year. Also helping to vary the daily routine were noon concerts, dances, and pep rallies.

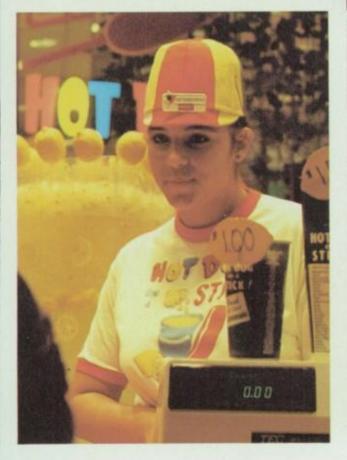

After school, if there wasn't too much homework to do or a job to go to, students could be found shopping in the local malls taking advantage of 'dollar day" every Tuesday night at Old Towne, or patronizing one of the favorite fast-food places.

The tests still piled up and the homework still had to be done, but at least there was always something to look forward to. It might not have been the only life, but with a little help from friends, the student's life was a bearable life.

HOMECOMING '85

CHERISH THE NIGHT

Until the night of November 15, the Varsity football team couldn't win for losing. Going in to the Homecoming game that Friday night their season record was 4-0. Spectator spirit and support was, needless to say, on its last leg. All that was left was hope.

But this hope proved to be enough. With a touchdown pass in the first quarter, the Gauchos were able to come away with a 6-0 lead over the Wilson Mules by the end of the half.

Because it was Homecoming, crowd spirit was at an all time high. Their enthusiasm was heightened even more by the half-time activities. As the classic cars rolled around the track carrying 1985's Homecoming court, the crowd's curiosity was momentarily shifted from who would win the game to who would be crowned King and Queen. Finally, the suspense was lifted. Bobby Burns and Susie Davies were chosen to reign over the "Cherish the Night" Homecoming dance.

When the ceremonies ended, the Varsity team was ready to win. Holding the Mule's through the final two quarters, the Gauchos pulled away with one more touchdown in the fourth quarter to end the game 12-0. Hope proved to be mightier than statistics.

The spirit of the game was carried over into the dance the following night. More than 500 people flocked to the Torrance Holiday Inn draped in the finery one would expect to see on Dynasty. Some arrived in limousines. Others came in Dad's old jalopy. But everyone came with the desire to have fun.

Once inside the Island Ball Room, the crowd was met by the booming sound of Audio Tech. From 7:30 p.m. to 11:30 p.m., the night was alive with the electricity of people enjoying themselves.

The dance ended too soon for most of the crowd. Afterwards, some couples chose to go out to eat, and other people found themselves at after-dance parties.

Overall, Homecoming '85 was a time to remember. The Varsity football team saved themselves from last place. School alumni got to come back and reminisce about old times. Most importantly, everyone had fun.

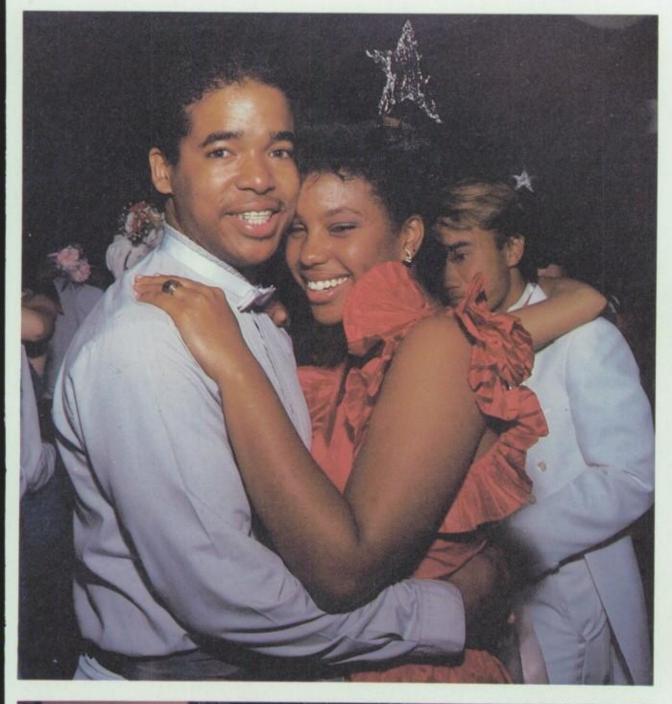

Bobby Burns and Susie Davies reign with pride.

YOUR IMAGINATION . . .

Never Ceases

As in every other year, the latest fashions have come and gone. Close to everything was worn in nearly every imaginable way. All around school, different kinds of people dressed in the fashions that suited their tastes.

From surfers to metallers, many groups had their own unique style. This year's style varied from person person, but the fashion was still the same.

Some of the "new" styles were part of a comeback of fashions from the late 1960's. Many prints, such as florals, paisleys, and plaids, were seen on shirts, skirts, dresses, and stirrup pants. Oversized jackets and sweaters were also wom in all sorts of sizes and colors.

To dress up these fashions, accessories were worn in over-abundance. Hanging from the neck and pinned to shirt collars, broaches, scarves, and beads added an extra pizzazz to the individual look.

With imagination as the key and money to spend, fashion was put into "Mint Condition."

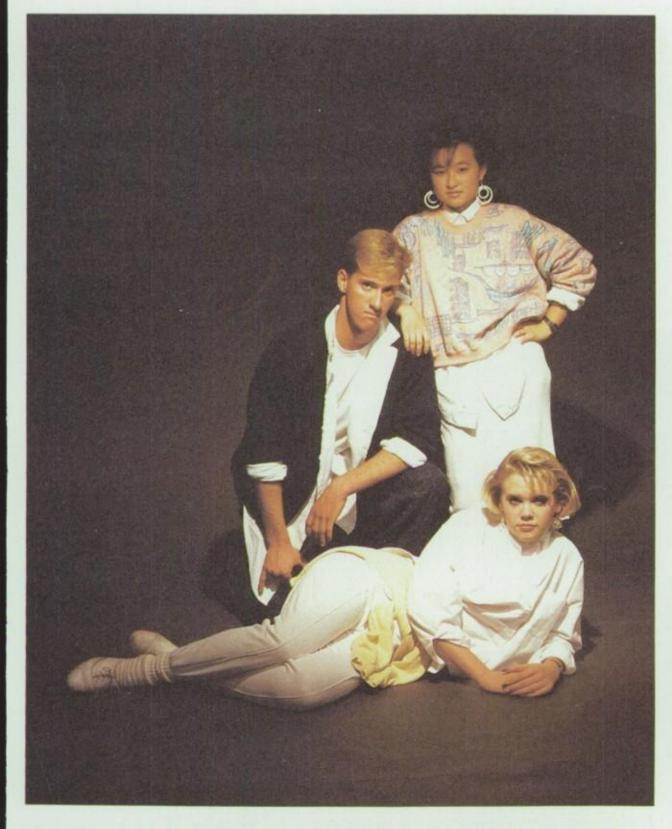

Everyone wears fashions in every imaginable way as shown here by Monica Sandowicz, Mia Merrit, Leroy Young and Minna Guillermo.

Displaying a classical taste in clothes are Holly Valenzuela and Cliff Numark.

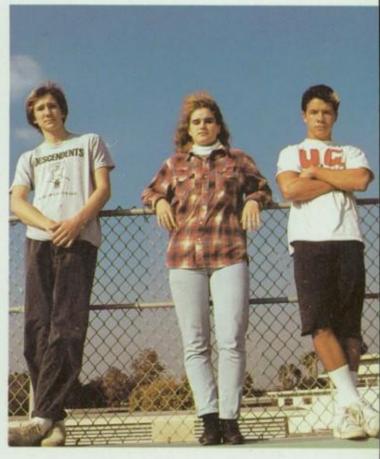

Worn by all, accessories added sparkle to fashions as well as putting them into Mint Condition.

Leaning toward a more trendy style of fashion are Tonei Oshiba, Derek Rubio and Jana Peterson.

For just a few minutes Emie Paulson, Reina Talavera and David Chavez stop to show off their individual style of dressing.

Stepping into the latest fashions, shoes with all types of shapes and colors are seen in abundance throughout the campus.

... LET IT RUN WILD

Fads: Setting a New Trend

Flourescents? Mini-trucks? Madonna? MTV? What? . . . Those were a few of last year's fads. During this year, many of the new trends were very diversified and unique.

Not only were there new fashions, but also many new fads. Honda Scooters added a touch of class to practical forms of transportation.

New Coke? Diet Coke? Caffeine-Free Diet Coke? Classic Coke? Cherry Coke? Space Coke? Which was the best? All of the new kinds of Coca-Cola added taste to students' imagination.

Along with magazines setting the fads, the musical artists were an added influence to the activities of students. Great sounds came from groups like WHAM!, Tears For Fears, ABC, Scorpions, and solo artists like Phil Collins, Bruce Springsteen, Sting, Luther Vandross, and Bryan Adams.

Sunglasses, an essential element to a student's attire: A variety of shapes, colors, and textures appeared on many faces. Not only were shades wom on nose bridges and ears, but also below the chin, on the head, and hanging on rear view mirrors.

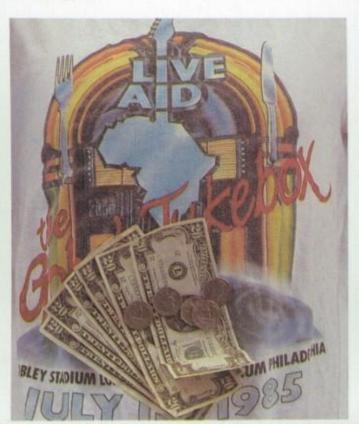

Wrist decor, popularized by Guess watches and the chic Swatch watches became an ongoing fad that began as just an amusement and was transformed into a mode of fashion.

In the midst of summer action, the worldwide LIVE-AID aired July 13 from Philadelphia, Pennsylvania and England via satellite. The musical concert was shown to a captivated crowd hoping to raise funds for the hungry people in Africa. Stars that were involved included Hall & Oates, WHAM!, Queen, Rick Springfield, Elton John, Go West, Phil Collins, Led Zeppelin, and many, many more. LIVE-AID was a great success and now, the world only waits for the food and clothing to reach the needy.

Scooters, Coke, music, shades, watches, LIVE-AID - fads for 1985, and in the case of caring for those in need - perhaps the look of 1986.

Out of nowhere, five new brands of Coca-Cola fall into the scene. Supporting the hungry is LIVE-AID.

Scooting around. Renee Paxton and Lesley Fritz have fun on a Honda Elite.

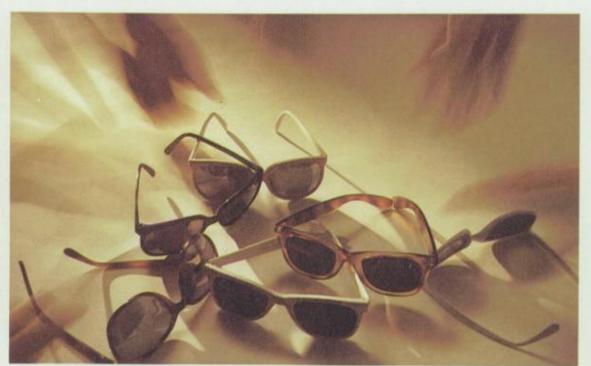

1986 is a time for Swatches and Guess Watches.

Everyone is grabbing for the latest shades.

With all the great artists combined together, a whole new sound is created for 1986,

LIFE DURING SCHOOL

Did It Really Exist?

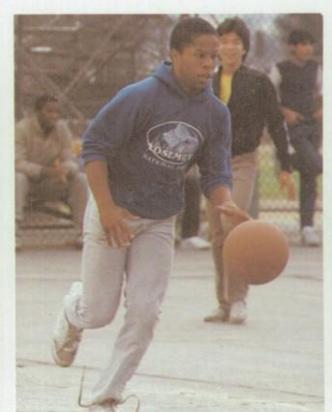

Life during school? Of course, there was some life moving around between the hours of 8AM and 3PM. It might have not seemed like it at certain times, but all in all, many hours of work were accomplished and most definitely paid off.

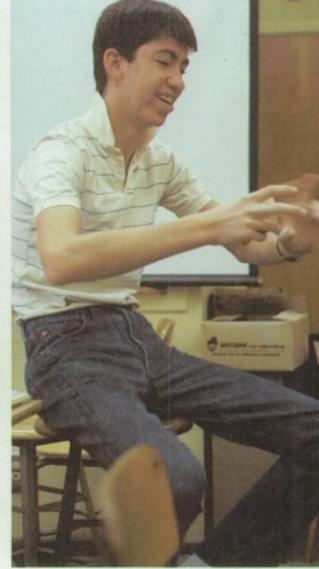

As soon as the first bell rang, students began to rack their brains, fumble for home work papers, and waste time by asking stupid questions to hold off a test. No one ever said getting a decent education was easy. Correction, no one ever said it was decent to get an easy education!

But, school was not all work and not play.

Students had chances to go to club meetings, noon dances, pep rallies, assemblies, and elections. A special quality about school was that there was always something different to do almost everyday.

Was school as exciting as it seemed? No to some, but yes to others. It all depended on whether a person wanted to get involved or not. And that was the answer to the question. There was life during school.

Chris Pop runs down the court to show-off his new form on his lay-up.

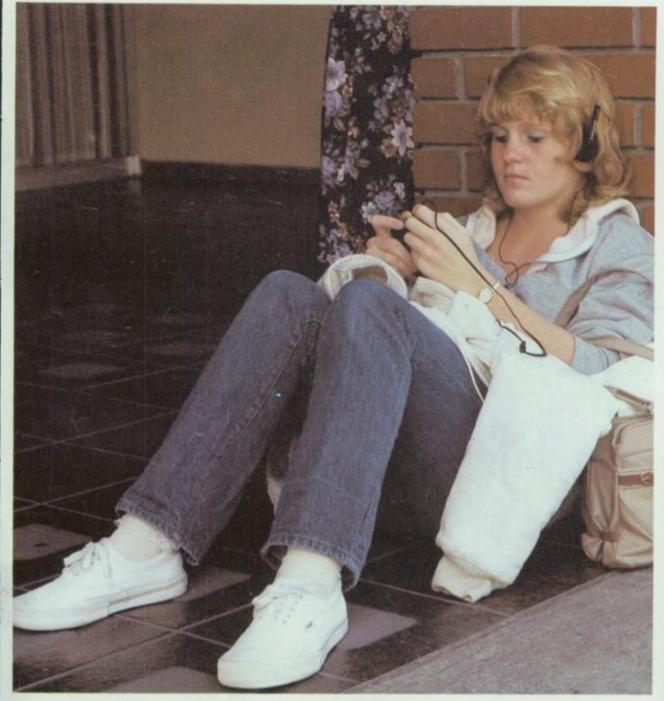

"This is the way to do it" says Senior Mike Kolezar as he demonstrates futuristic needlepoint.

In amazement, Jeff Jones watches a friend put his "hacky-sack" into action during lunch.

LIFE AFTER SCHOOL

What A Blast!

How about life after school? Right after the last bell, students rushed off to do their own things, on campus or off.

Some went to club meetings or after-school practices. Keywanettes and band, and others, met to discuss activities and to fix up routines. Students stayed after school to get things finished.

Other than schoolwork, some students had to get jobs to raise money for expenses. They had to find time to do homework, jobwork, and also time for themselves.

Of course, there was more to do than work, but it would take a million years to name everything a student accomplished at the end of the school day.

Waiting for her bus ride home, Christi Jones sits at the San Jose Hyatt Regency for the Journalism Convention.

At the local Baskin Robbin's, Senior John Davis serves a "local" chocolate-Mousse Royale on a sugar cone.

John Ramierez is happy for the day's end as he cruises out of the Student Parking Lot.

LIVE WIRES!!!

The Spirit Rally Was A Charge!

Rah! Rah! The sports season had begun with an exciting spirit rally. Students far and near gathered on the football bleachers during 5th period on September 25th to cheer on their favorite teams. This included the recognition of the Bees and Varsity football, basketball, cross country, drill team, tall and small flags, the band, and the Bees, songs, and varsity cheerleaders. Entertainment from the drama class included a skit that successfully helped to promote the activity card sales and to boost the student body morale. "The drama class gave up many nutritions and lunches, but it was well worth it!" exclaimed drama teacher, Mrs. Mirich. Leadership class, the administrators, and the coaches helped organize this successful rally, but most of the credit went to the student body for upgrading the school's

LOCAL AMUSEMENT

... At The Lomita Fair

Friday night! Saturday night! Sunday night! People searched for something to do.

One of the places to find local excitement was at the Lomita Fair, held at St. Margaret Mary's on September 6th, 7th, and 8th. Just approaching the glowing lights made the young and old alike more anxious and excited to get there. For some students, it was a place to get together before school doors opened.

"It was fun seeing some of my friends before school," said sophomore Lauri Montana.

To summarize the fair, it was short, exciting,

To summarize the fair, it was short, exciting, and fun. But for the people who missed it, the fair included everything from amusing games to delicious foods, and of course, plenty of cute and cheerful faces.

Fear never enters their mind as senior Susan Beahm and junior Carrie Sunderland ride the octopus.

For senior Armida Parra, the Lomita Fair is a good place to meet friends.

SWITCHING ROLES

All-Stars Surprise Seniors

As tradition demanded, the girls came out on the football field, brandishing flags and Jerseys. Their male counterparts were following closely behind. Fourteen boys dressed in tank tops and short skirts came out to give their best imitation of female cheerleaders. It was the start of the annual Powder Puff football game.

For three weeks before the game, the two rival teams practiced diligently with the help of their coaches. Both teams worked hard, but the All-Stars proved to be superior. Breaking the Seniors' winning streak, the All-Stars won the game with a score of 13-6.

During half time, the candidates for Mr. Irresistible were announced to the crowd. They were all qualified, but only one could win. That one was senior Glen Maughan.

Thanks to all those involved, the Powder Puff game served as a pleasant distraction from the school routine.

FROM THE HEART

Bringing Home A Little Christmas

Christmas was the time for giving. With the Key Club sponsored Christmas Basket Drive, students hoped to bring a brighter Christmas to under-privileged families, who otherwise wouldn't have a "traditional" Christmas.

Forty-six homerooms participated, donating a wide variety of goods - from Christmas trees and toys to food and money. Approximately $2,600 was donated by the students plus food, clothing, and toys - all totaling about $23,000, to forty-two families.

Each homeroom was assigned a family to help. They were given about a week and a half to bring in all of the goods. Everything was then transferred from the individual homerooms to the Multi-Purpose Room, where the Key Club took over. On December 19, 1985, the Key Club delivered the goods to the families.

The Christmas Basket Drive was a major project for the Key Club. They benefitted by receiving the satisfaction of helping people. Edwin Tobias, Lieutenant Governor of Division 19, stated "You don't realize how many people need help until you help them."

Thanks to the Key Club, many families benefitted by receiving needed food and presents, just in time for the Holiday Season.

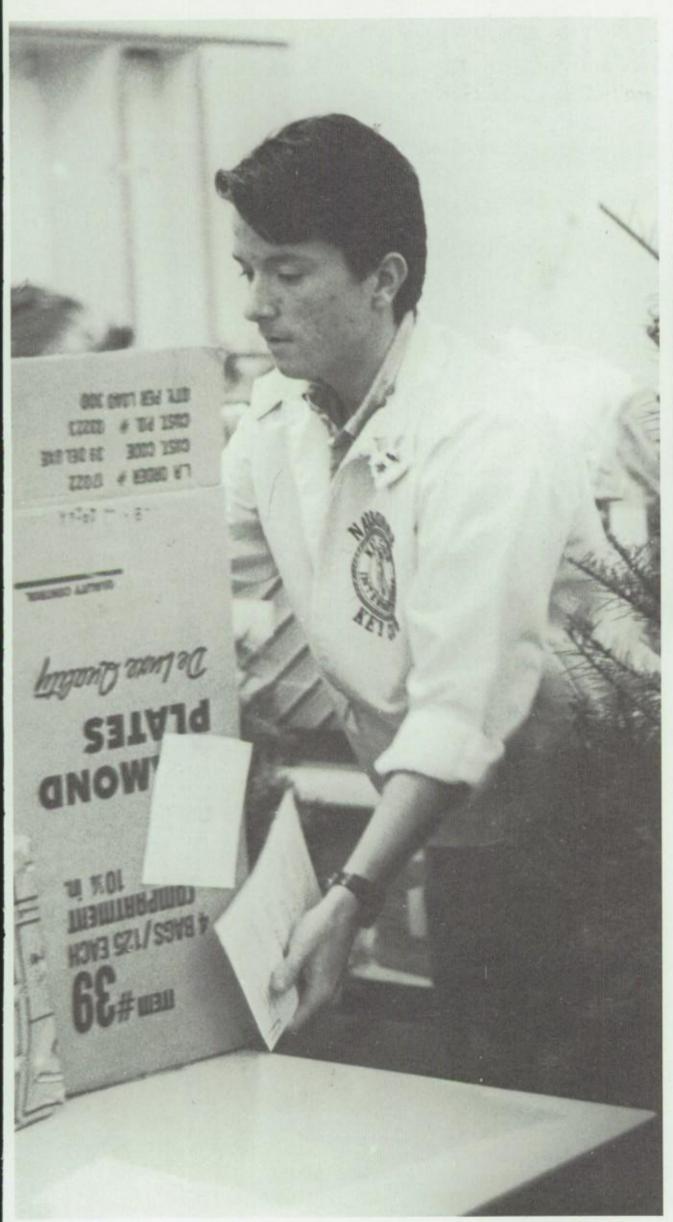

Hurrying to check her lists. Key Club 10th grade princess Stephanie Uchida, realizes that everything is in perfect order.

Packing a shopping cart full of presents, Key Club fall president Derrick Sera, gets ready to deliver goods to the next family.

"Oh boy I can't wait 'til I see the face of my new owner!" exclaims Doggiepoo as he anxiously awaits delivery to his new home.

Carefully putting down the bow, Alex Lutz continues arranging the boxes, getting everything ready for delivery.

"Hey there's something in this tree!" observes senior. Allison Uchida as she fixes the tree for the new family.

PARENTS ARE IMPRESSED

Seniors Steal the Show

The auditorium darkened and a couple played by De De Derr and Albert Macabury was the beginning of the annual Senior Parents' Reception held on January 22. Included in this reception was a play. "Androcles and the Lion", which featured Derr, Macabury, and David Bainbridge, a solo, "Memories," sung by Allison Uchida, a piano solo performed by Nancy Peng and a slide show. This slide show displayed baby pictures of seniors and teachers, as well. In between these activities the senior class officers presented the fall Assistant Principal Carolyn Bohm with a corsage in appreciation for all her work she accomplished during her stay at this school.

After the auditorium presentation, seniors and parents congregated in the MPR for refreshments consisting of cake and punch.

Etemity, the class of 1986, was given its chance to shine, and they did.

Erin Yoshida, waiting to see how the cake tastes, glances at her mom for the nod of approval.

"Wow, Dad, wasn't this reception great?" asks Bobby Burns to his father.

"Look" Mrs. Uchima says to Cheryl Uchima, "I recognize that girl from when you went to Junior high school."

From the smile on Mrs. Bush's face, one can easily tell she is proud of her son, Byron Bush.

Singing her solo, "Memories", Allison Uchida catches everyone's attention.

Like father, like son.

ROCKING TO THE BEAT

At the Snow Jam

The Snow Jam winter dance turned out to be a great time for everyone who came. Held on December 13, the dance provided a last chance for students to let themselves go before settling down to the rigorous chore of studying for finals.

D.J. David Douglass played a wide enough variety in the music to keep the crowd satisfied. The dress code was "dress to impress," but the atmosphere was far from stiff.

Just one of the many dances that were held throughout the year, the Snow Jam, like the other dances, helped to both relieve student stresses and build school morale.

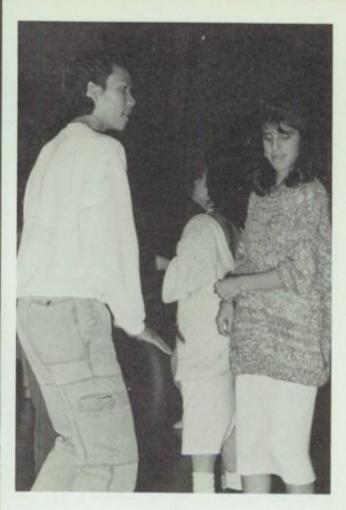

Sitting this one out, sophomore Kristle Landers and senior David Miller rest their dancing feet.

Sliding to the beat, sophomore Eric Bendy and junior Leslie Moreno move to the Family's "Screams of Passion."

Catching the spirit, sophomores Tung Nguyen and Jackie Gonzales get into the groove.

The distance between juniors Chris Heuser and Cheryl Jackson shows that dancing has come a long way since the days of "cheek to cheek."

WORKING TOGETHER

Being the Best

Guided by Advisor Ms. Alison Rittger, the Green and Gold staff produced the only weekly newspaper in the school district this year.

Editors Corey Albert (News), Ceres Corbin (Editorials), Monica Sandowicz and Glenn Wong (Features), and Holly Valenzuela and Daniel Inouye (Sports) gave weekly assignments, laid out pages and drove Managing Editor Dorothy Gor crazy with their errors every day in B11, working to meet deadlines.

Artists Lane Nakamura and Glenn Wong and photographer Kevin Takumi also played integral roles on staff, enhancing all four pages of the weekly paper with their work.

Advertising Manager Mayur Desai brought variety to the paper with ads and bits of philosophy that helped bind the staff together.

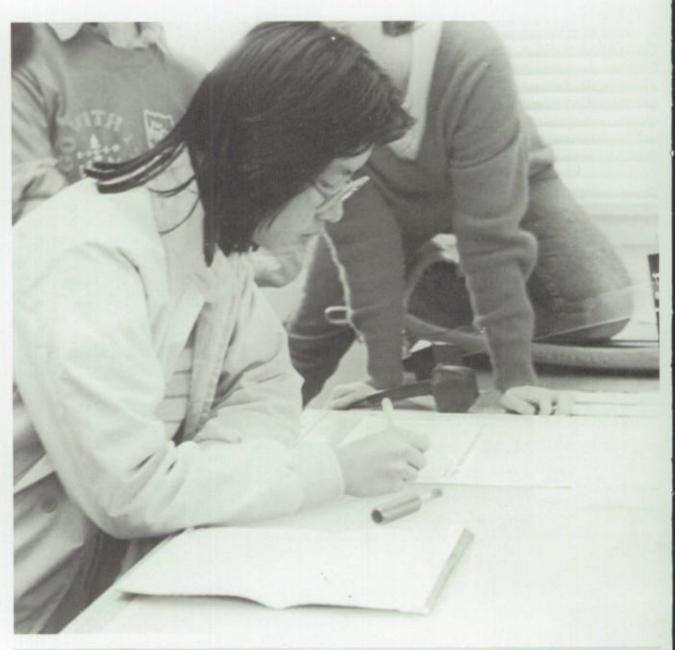

"On Mondays and Tuesdays, we do most of the reporting and writing. Wednesdays and Thursdays are crazy, because we're working to meet our deadline. By Friday we're all burned out," Managing Editor Dorothy Gor said.

Hectic as it was, being on the newspaper staff was loads of fun. Staff writers and editors learned a lot, improved their writing skills, gained organization skills, and raised their stress tolerance, while producing an informative and entertaining weekly newspaper.

The newspaper was a cooperative effort. It worked well only because of the journalism staff's strong writing and complete dedication.

CREATING MEMORIES

El Eco Compiles An Ever-Lasting Memories

It is twelve midnight; the moon is full and the air a frigid chill. Legend has it that these are favorable conditions for werewolves. But of course, any such existence of this creature has been disproved. However, there are still plenty of other "weirdos" awake in the city this late at night. One of these was the yearbook staff - a bizarre collection of individuals who dared to be adventuresome by putting themselves in an entire year of yearbook. This meant two semesters of deadlines. A major deadline meant staying in school not only until midnight but sometimes until three in the moming.

Besides "suffering" hectic deadlines, the staff also had to withstand "punishment" from the advisor, Mr. Talley. Like a nagging mother, Mr. Talley made sure his small, yet hardworking, staff met their deadlines. He also did everything from brainstorming with a layout person to squeeze out a headline to helping a photographer produce a perfect print.

Of course, most of the work was not laid upon Mr. Talley; it was assigned to the layout staff, the photo staff, and the editors. The small crew of layout people were always busy drawing up layouts and writing copy. Layout work was also given to most of the editors because of the tiny size of the layout staff. The photographers had the job of taking pictures, developing proofs, printing the pictures, and then finally spotting them.

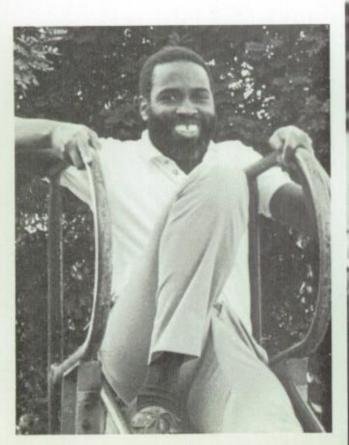

No matter what job a person had, though, he or she was part of a big 'family' who worked together well to create a book full of ever-lasting memories.

Making up almost half of our student body, our sophomores were special people, contributing to the spirit of the school.

Many sophomores had to deal with new surroundings, new people, and other transitions between Junior High and Senior High School. They also discovered that there was more to high school than just dances and football games; high school was full of hard work. In order to be successful in high school, many sophomores had to buckle down and discipline themselves in their studies, while struggling to remain accepted by their peers.

Taking mandatory classes such as health, driver's education and guidance plus the basic math, English, and science classes, most sophomores could be seen around campus with backpacks full of books, ready for the night's homework.

Having just spent their first year in high school, sophomores had discovered all the activities high school could offer, from the various clubs and organizations, to registering for their own classes.

From new experiences they grew, stretching a little closer to their goals.

Rhythmic gymnastics is a relatively new sport in the United States which was first introduced at the 1984 Olympic Games in Los Angeles. This sporting event involves several body movements of varying difficulty with the handling of different hand equipment such as a rope, hoop, ball, ribbon, or clubs. The gymnast performs for one minute in front of four judges who score the performance on a scale from one through ten-ten being of superior quality. The gymnast is judged on elegance, accuracy, originality, and flexibility.

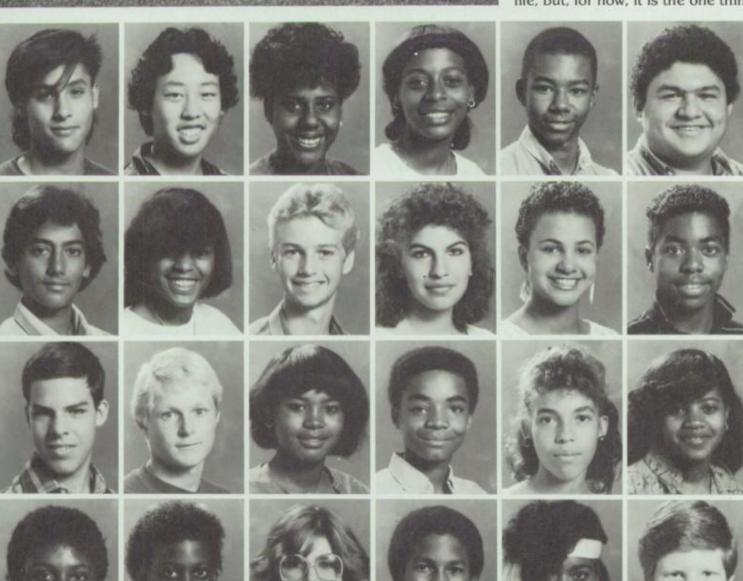

Mediocrity was not good enough for rhythmic gymnast Kelly Hundt. This sophomore was a crucial member of the Southern California team, "West Coast Waves," for five years. Training four hours a day, five days a week at Cal State Dominguez Hills. Hundt devoted much of her time to improving her techniques and training for state competitions. Currently, she ranks fifteenth in the senior division of the United States.

When asked how did rhythmic benefited her, she answered, "It develops one's coordination and muscle tone, and it teaches one self-discipline."

Although rhythmic took up much of her time, Hundt still had a few spare hours for her school work, friends, and family. On weekends, one could often find her browsing in local malls and enjoying a family gathering.

Rhythmic gymnastics might not be the only thing in Hundt's life, but, for now, it is the one thing that keeps her going.

NEVER-ENDING BATTLE

They were trapped in between two zones. These impoverished souls were banished from the lower, their insecurities vanished due to experience, but they were excluded from the upper because of their insufficient wisdom. These were the juniors.

To be promoted, they had to venture through an unforeseen year of unfavorable surprises. Dismayed at how much more of a challenge their year was, juniors quickly learned to endure the many harder courses they had to take.

"With so many hard classes, it was a "killer" year. . ."

was what Brenda Andrews said of her junior year. Many of these demanding courses included chemistry, math analysis, and of course, Advanced Placement U.S. History.

To keep the school functioning and to maintain order, organized staffs and individuals must all work together. This group of organized people made up the faculty and staffs ranging from the Administrators to the Office Workers to the Plant Manager.

In the Admistration, Principal Mr. Cheetham and Assistant Principals Mr. Roulette and Mrs. Bohm corrlated projects and events. Workers in the five offices kept busy helping students with scheduling conflicts and helped counselors with their load of students. Career Center Advisors, Mr. Bishop and Mr. Clark, assisted pupils with their after high school careers and schooling. They also found alternatives to dropping out of school.

As a whole, the faculty and staffs served to continue progress and growth as the school year advanced. Throughout the year, their goal was to build education to "The Mintest Condition."

"Now you better stop it!" exclaims Mrs. Leggett as she stops her lesson to accomidate her class's silliness.

"Wow look at all of this work!" contemplates Mrs. Hixon as she tries to reduce one of the many piles of work.

FACULTY AND STAFFS

WORKING TOGETHER

Administrators Try Harder

Helping the student body, faculty, and staff throughout the year, the administrators were our backbone and kept the school running.

As a team they exchanged ideas, went through daily staff meetings, listened to opinions, and most of all, supported each other. "The key word is collegiality," Mrs. Bohm said as Mr. Cheetham agreed.

Along with running the school smoothly, the administrators have set high goals for themselves, the staff, and the student body. To keep the school on top, Mr. Cheetham thinks that "good attendance," lack of apathy, the open-door policy, communication, and a qualified teaching staff" are all imperative.

"This school is different and special be-

"This school is different and special because we have many different racial and social groups," Mrs. Hom remarked. "It is beneficial because it provides an opportunity for students to have a rich learning education by getting to know about various people and their different backgrounds and cultures," she explained.

School is not only homework and going to classes. Mrs. Bohm feels, "to be a successful school, it is important to be supportive of everyone, get involved in clubs, sports, academic groups and many extra-curricular activities."

Our involvement in the community is steadily growing rapidly. With encouragement from the administrators, the PTSA and the School Site Council have helped the school in many activities.

Being involved with the students and staff, the administrators have helped the school to acheive its high goals.

IT ONLY GETS BETTER

Maintaining Mint Condition

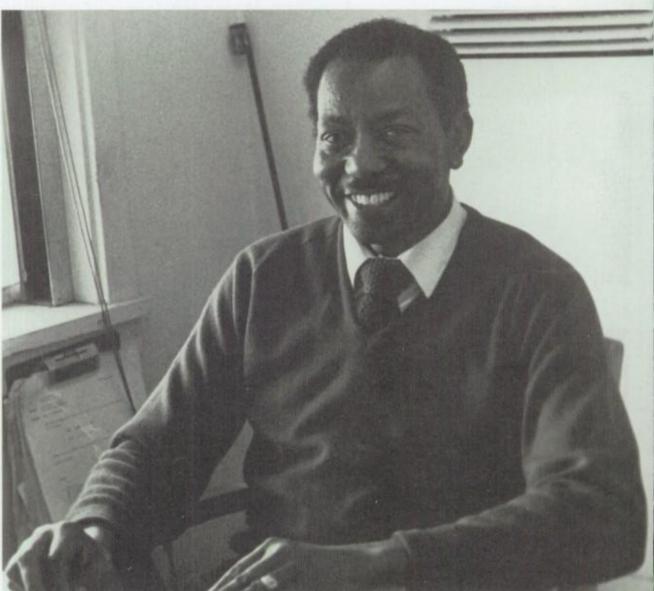

Remember eating in the cafeteria? Remember being bullied by a friend? Remember becoming ill during a class? Remember the perils of tenth grade registration? If so, then remember the friendly staff person that was there to help? These staff members included the cafeteria workers, who served the meals each day with a smile; the attendance office and main office staff, who helped with attendance, personal, and other problems each day; and the peace officers, who made sure the school was safe and offered much needed direction to new, confused, and disoriented students. Without the assistance of these people, the school would not run so smoothly. These staff members were there to provide direction in the midst of confusion, harmony in the midst of discourse, and stability in the midst of insurgency. In other words they kept the school running in "Mint Condition.

PRICELESS INSTRUCTION

Teachers Uphold Mint Condition

For most students, teachers have played an important role in their lives. Beginning with first grade, (and for some, even before then) a teacher was the source for information, besides parents. Not only did they teach subjects from books, but also ideas and philosophies that cannot be learned from printed pages. These ideas included responsibility, companionship and ability to get along with others. Although in later years, students may have forgotten that $a^2+b^2=c^2$ or "i before except after c", they still retained these qualities that were taught by their teachers.

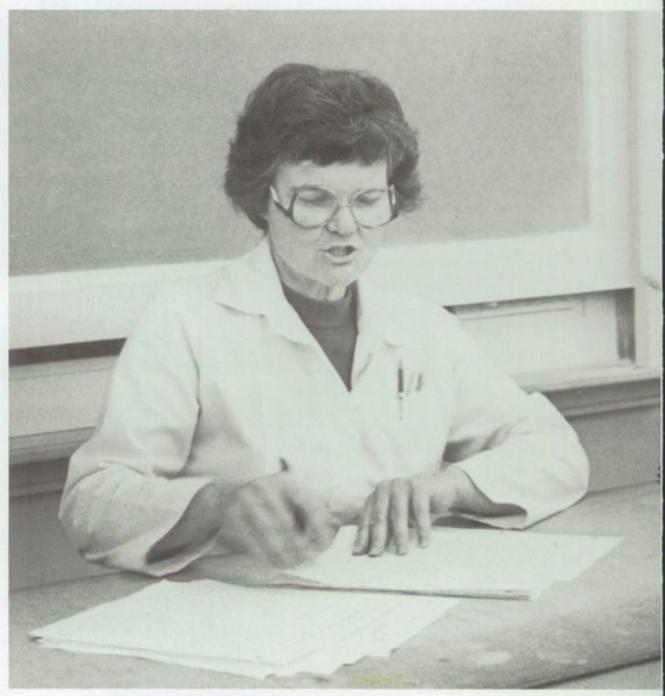

To acquire the ability to teach students, most teachers completed at least 5 years of adanced education, a few of them persevering and obtaining higher degrees. This devotion to education compelled them to instruct students in a better manner, maintaining mint condition.

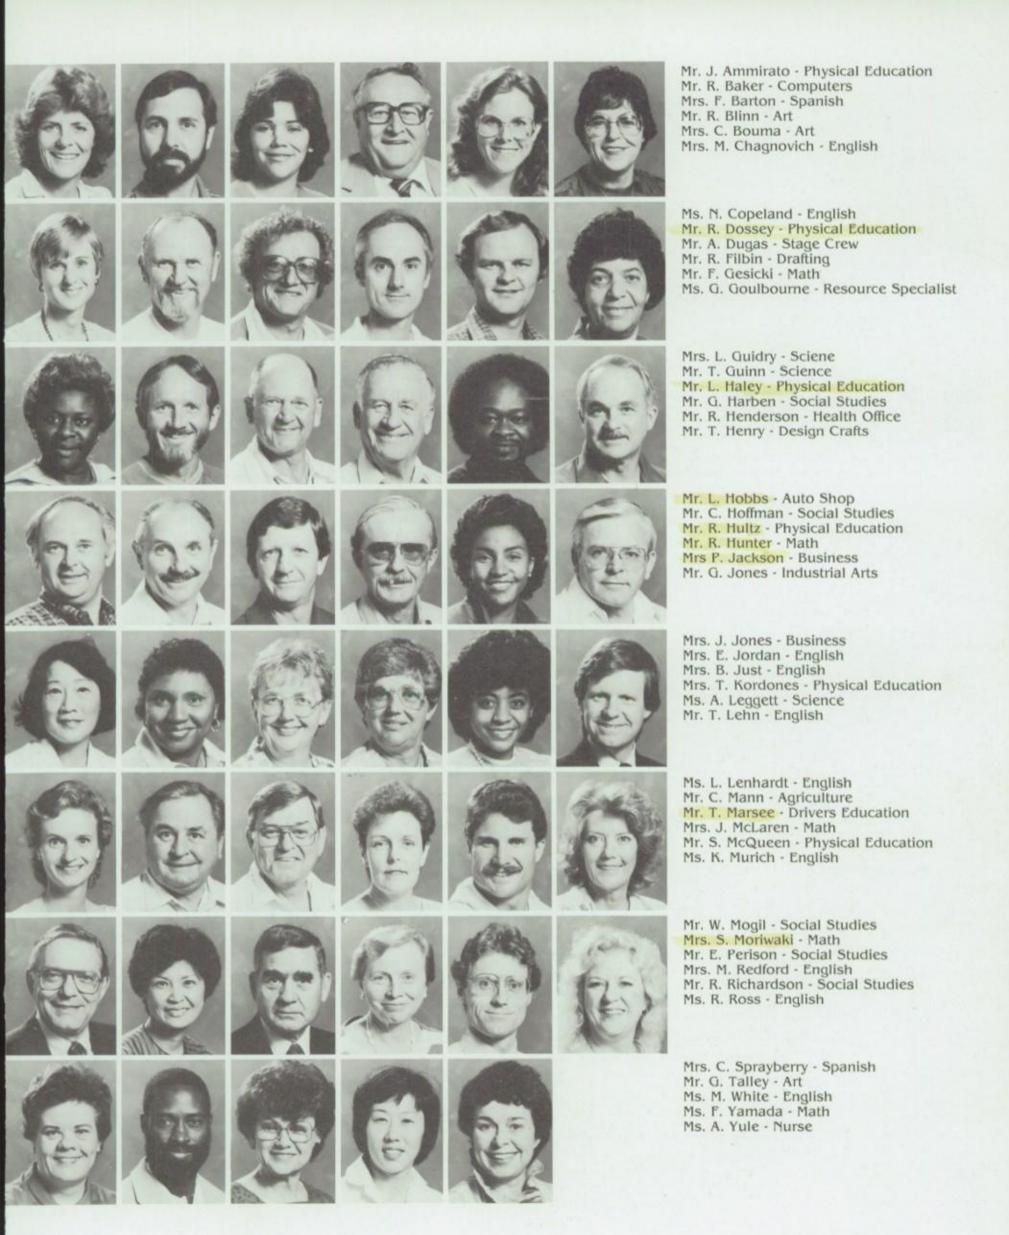

Checking for accuracy. Mr. Filbin grades a student's drawing.

Not impressed with her class's performance. Mrs. Kerr grades a homework assignment.

Amused by his class's humor, Mr. Gesecki looks out in bewilderment.

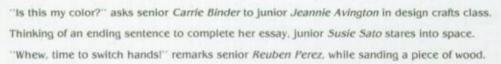

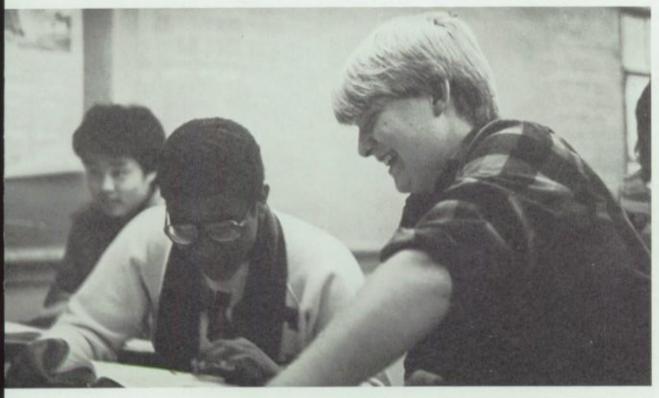

Maintaining a tough academic reputation and keeping it in mint condition consumed the thoughts of the student body throughout the school year. To accomplish this task, gauchos filled their ciriculum with academic subjects. Biology or physics for sophomores, chemistry and U.S. history for juniors and government and economics for seniors. Not to mention the countless hours spent in math, English, art and other classes completed a busy schedule for the typical student.

As a result of this rigourous program, students with a Narbonne diploma were better prepared to face the life that begins after high school - be it college, military service or a full time job. With experience gained in these classes, students looked forward to broad areas of fields to pursue.

Getting off the subject. Junior Greg Jones and sophomoe Vince Brown make fun of President Nixon's picture.

ACADEMICS

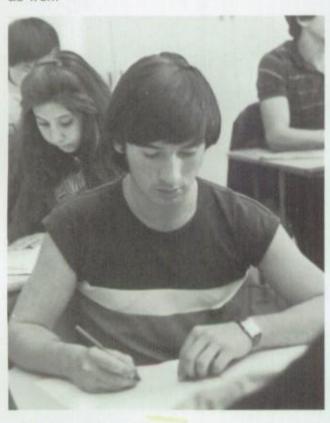

TONGUE TWISTERS

Hola! Konnichiwa! Bonjour!

Do you know what this means? You would if you had taken foreign language? Foreign language helps bring nations together, while uniting people of different races and colors. Providing students with a better understanding of the philosophies and the cultures of foreign nations, foreign language develops the individual's character, broadening one's horizon. Also, because many English words are derived from other languages, the study of a foreign language improves the students' vocabulary.

Required for entrance to a few colleges, foreign languages were a popular elective for the college bound students. Besides Spanish and French, Japanese was, for the first time, offered to the students. These added classes sparked the enthusiasm for many students to switch from an unnecessary elective to a required course.

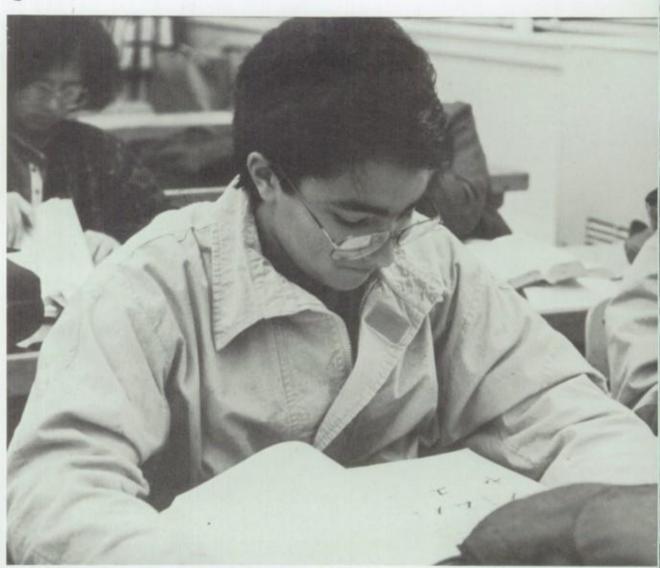

No matter what language course students took - whether it was Spanish, French or the newly added Japanese - learning a new language not only enabled them to speak to a non-English speaker but to broaden their horizons as well.

"I don't know what these things are!" moans junior Devin Ishida as he studies his characters in Japanese.

LOOKING IN THE PAST

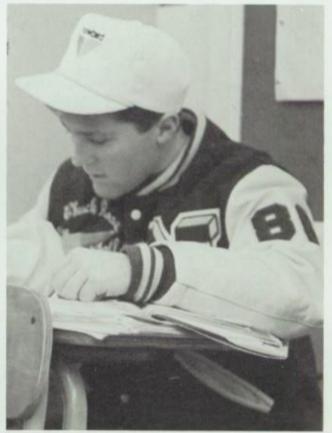

From the Beginning

What is Social Studies? Social Studies is where we obtain our knowledge and understanding of society's thoughts and actions. It is the foundation upon which our forefathers built this nation. It is the essentials of democracy and it is the key to the future.

From psychology to U.S. history, social studies has played an important role in student life. Learning their rights as U.S. citizens, students have contributed their time and effort in creating a better school system and atmosphere. By following and interpreting the laws, students have petitioned acts of administrators, planned and directed school activities, met in caucuses, and nominated and voted among themselves for student officers.

Social studies has continuously proven its need and resourcefulness. It is important for the student to permeate and comprehend the diverse knowledge, actions, and results of man and so to extrapolate the upcomings of civilization. Therefore, without the knowledge of our past, there would be no future.

THAT EXTRA EDGE

Magnet Math Makes the Grade

The Magnet school gave motivated students the opportunity to receive a better education. Having an excellent staff of teachers, the magnet classes helped students get into a higher level of education, which in turn helped them get a better background in the subject.

Magnet mathematical classes gave students the chance to develop better math skills. Taking classes from Algebra to Calculus, these students took the opportunity to better prepare themselves for their futures with math courses will be a neccessity for upcoming lifestyles and occupations.

PHYSICALLY SPEAKING

Working Towards The Future

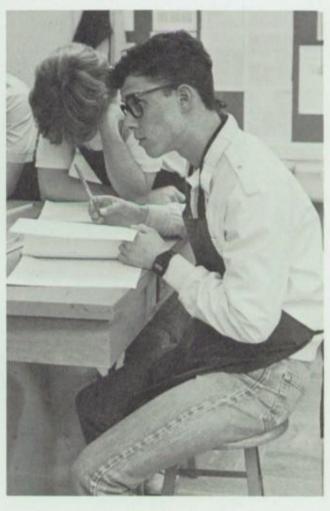

"Never use English when Greek or Latin will do!" is an often heard remark from Mr. Just, the physics teacher.

Magnet science classes gave those enrolled the chance to broaden their aspects in the world of science. From biology to chemistry and physics, the courses contributed in helping to better understand the present-day world.

Having to enroll in at least three magnet classes each semester, students entered classes which were geared toward a more serious student. Thus, the magnet student received a more challenging and exciting class schedule.

As the year progressed, efforts of the faculty, administration and the students all contributed to help make the magnet school program run smoothly.

WORK OF ART

Medalist In the Making

Artistic abilities could be expressed in many ways. Through fine art, industrial art, and even modern dance courses, students were able to use and develop their special talents.

Most students took fine art courses as an elective; however, those classes were not always as easy as expected. The days of pasting and doodling ended as the student learned to put meaning into his work and to use art as a form of communication.

Combining mechanical as well as artistic skills, the industrial arts courses taught students a useful trade that could be used after high school. In these classes, the draftsmen of tomorrow layed the foundation for their futures.

In modern dance courses, students were able to express themselves freely through the movements of their bodies. Emotions were brought to the surface in ways that were appealing to the mind as well as the eyes.

Most importantly, the arts programs taught three dimensional thinking - the art process combining skill, talent, and creativity. It motivated students to express themselves better and to prepare for the future.

START... DATA... RUN...

The Final Print-Out

Computers have started a new revolution. Since the invention of the hand calculator, computers have played a major role in both the development of human minds and the resource-fullness of this country. Because computers are economical and efficient, they are slowly replacing hard labor in the home, school, and factory.

Taught by Mr. Baker, a variety of computer classes, including an A.P. class, provided students with an essential skill for their future success. Working on the TRS-80, Apple II, and Comodore Pet, these students studied such components as the Basic and Pascal languages.

Sometimes referred to as "great brains," computers, or the designers and programmers working through them, can imitate many aspects of the human brain. But no matter how "intelligent" computers have become, they will never be able to replace the human mind.

Just finished writing a program, junior Tom Evans runs it to test how accurate of a job he did.

A FAIR CHANCE

Because of the advanced technological machinery and teacher - student tutoring and counseling, visually handicapped students now have equal opportunity to obtain a higher education. Headed by Mr. Taylor, this special education program was specifically designed to individually help their regular classes.

They were expected to complete the same assignments and to take the same exams as other students, except these students were furnishd with special materials, such as the magnifying copy machines and the braille duplicating machines to convert printing in books and magazines to either large type or braille.

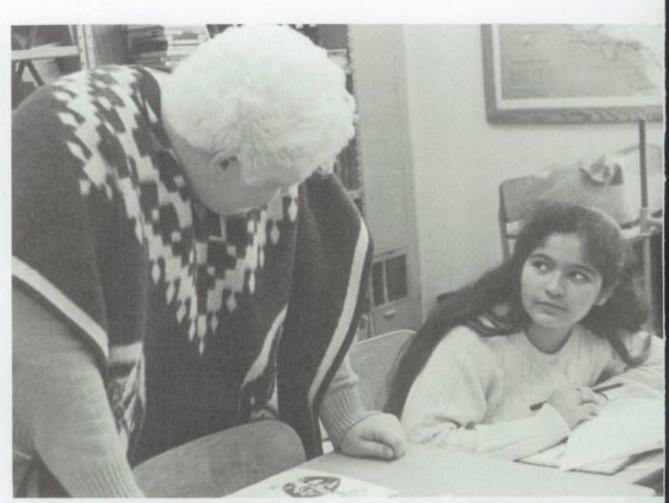

Unlike other students with 20/20 eyesight, these students had to rely on their other senses such as hearing and touch to complete activities. Therefore, these students experienced what many people have never experienced in a lifetime and they appreciated what others did not realize existed. These students may be classified as handicapped, but in reality, they are special humans. From their diverse knowledge and remarkable capabilities, these students may be the leaders of tomorrow.

LEARNING TO COPE

ESL Students

Receiving students from every comer of the world, it was the duty of Mrs. Marks and Mrs. Rivero to teach these pupils English as a second language. With nearly 130 students from places as near as Mexico to as far away as India, their job was never easy. As their students quickly discovered, adjusting to the customs and language of a strange country takes time and a lot of hard work.

Memorizing the myriad of nouns and verbs was the simplest task faced by the ESL students. The most difficult chore - learning to adapt - was an obstacle that the ESL teachers had to help each student overcome.

In 1986, the number of graduating ESL students reached an all-time high. As for the future, this number is expected to continue rising.

FARMING THE FUTURE

Working Towards Perfection

Future Farmers of America was an interical organization. "The purpose of this club was to develop leadership training with agriculture subjects, develop citizenship, responsibility and good working habits." explained FFA sponsor, Mr. Mann. Involved students got a chance to own and take care of animals such as sheep, pigs, rabbits, and steers. During the summer, animal owners have an opportunity to take their animals to the San Fernando Fair.

Involved students got a chance to do something for the school such as landscaping and designing school grounds.

English As Our First Language

English is an intricate skill that is necessary to survive in today's society. With a highly advanced and diversified program, the English department offered students a golden opportunity to gain an advantage over the "common" people in the "world after high school".

For those who planned to attend college, Advanced Placement courses including A.P. Composition and A.P. Literature were taught, giving college credit to those who passed a special Advanced Placement test.

Other courses were also taught to help make college easier. Although no college credit was given, these courses taught the basics of writing and creativity.

Even for those who did not plan to attend college, the English skills learned helped them to communicate with people they would encounter in the working world.

Many times the students did not like their English assignments and the way the subject was taught, but they soon realized it was a necessity to survive in the English spoken community. Everyone must have had communication skills to be successful in their future.

MAKING LIFE EASIER

Economics, Business, and Work Experience

While some classes offered in high school seemed to have had no practical application, home economics, business and work experience were different. These courses taught a student skills that could be applied to everyday life.

In home economics, students learned practical skills that are necessary to function independently, such as cooking, sewing and parenting. Other home economics classes such as textiles and international foods taught finer skills that could be looked upon as career choices.

Business classes also taught practical as well as advanced skills. In Accounting IA, for example, students learned not only how to manage a small business's account, but also how to budget one's own checkbook. Typing, shorthand and business management classes taught skills that could be applied in future jobs.

Work experience concentrated on jobs the students already had. While in this class, a student could leave school after fourth of fifth period to go to work at a part-time job. This was a way in which students could experience working off-campus while still receiving credits.

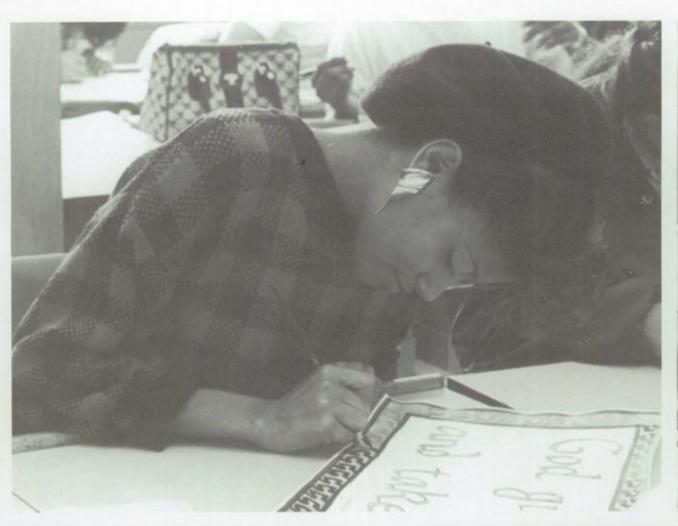

All of these classes offered skills that were very useful in the long run. Experience with home economics, business and work made a person's life easier and transformed them into a more well-rounded person.

Juniors Joakim Vance and Vu Le, members of Key Club's board of directors, take suggestions on an upcoming Key Club project.

Participation was the key factor to the continuation and unity of clubs and organizations scattered across the campus.

The clubs offered on and off campus ranged in many styles and interests, and were formed for different reasons. Clubs such as Key Club, Keywanettes, Jane Addams, and Barronettes were organized to help out in community and scholastic activities, whereas clubs like SACSI, Impact Club, and the New life Club were formed to satisfy a need or to express views and opinions of their members.

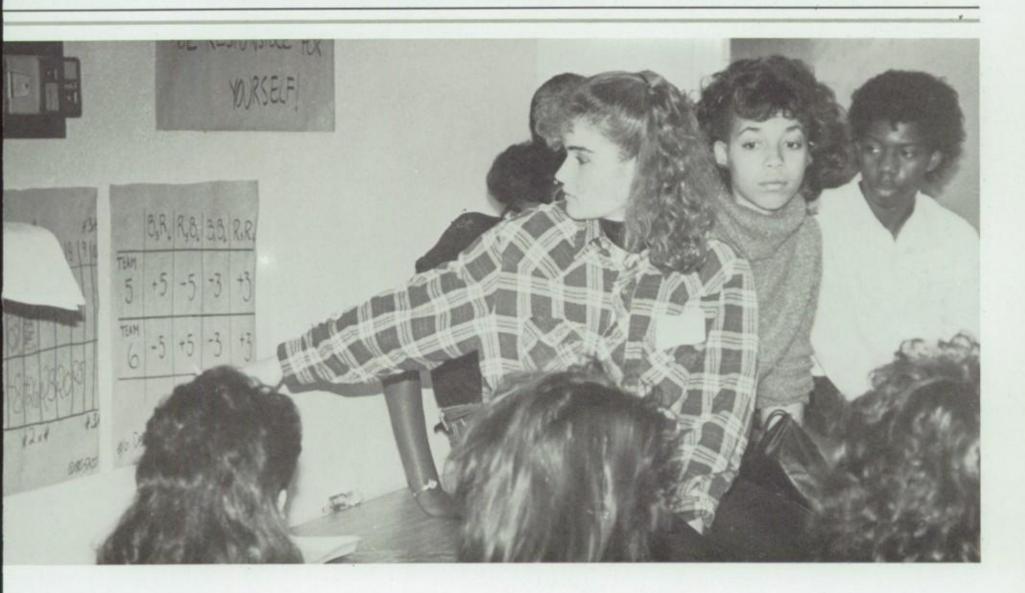

Unfortunately, a few clubs did not manage to participate in their regular activities for lack of a sponsor or lack of participation. The Chess Club and Sailing were two organizations which were not offered. To compensate for the loss of these inactive clubs, two new organizations were formed to help students cope with their problems and pressures - the Impact Club and SADD (Students Against Driving Drunk).

Those who joined the clubs gained some responsibility and kept the school in mint condition.

LEADERS OF TOMORROW

In Preparation

Mexico relief was an important project for the fall leadership class to support the earth-quake victims. They had only six days to raise money for rescue efforts. They spear-headed it with a noon dance, which raised more then one-hundred dollars. The next five days donations were made from students in each homeroom. At the end of the week the student body donated over one-thousand dollars to the Red Cross for rescue efforts. "The money that was collected was enough but we could have done better if there was only more time." explained senior Farrah Joudi, a member of the leadership class.

Enabling the students to be more productive, the class was divided into five committees: Assembly, Election, Sportsmanship, Publicity, the Student Improvement and Communication committee, and the Executive board. Each committee had their own responsibilities.

The Executive Board consisted of the ASB President, ASB Vice-President, ASB Secretary, ASB Treasurer, ASB Historian, and the Girls' and Boys' League Presidents. Each member was a liason of one of the five committees.

The leadership class did several charity drives and different types of activities that made the fall semester even more enthusiastic.

TAKING CHARGE . . .

... To Represent

As the end of the previous year's semester came to a close, a new set of students were elected to carry on the never-ending duties of class officers. Each set of officers had different tasks to perform.

The senior officers were in charge of collecting senior dues, along with encouraging seniors to buy "Eternity" sweatshirts. They also had to measure every senior for his or her cap and gown sizes. Arranging everything for the Senior Parents' Reception was another important duty. From programs to refreshments, the officers had to make sure that the reception was perfect. They also had a senior class meeting in March where attending seniors got a sneak-preview of Prom fashions and a slide show of where Prom was to be held, at the Ambassador Hotel.

The junior and sophomore officers also had certain responsibilities. The junior officers turned over a new leaf - a junior council was formed, consisting of one member and one alternate from each history class. This council was in charge of compiling a list of colors, name, and Prom sites for their following year's senior class. Along with the junior officers, the sophomore officers sponsored several noon dances, offering Gauchos something else to do during lunch besides eating. The four underclassmen officers were also hard at work in the Student Government room on various committees.

No matter what duties they had to perform, though, the class officers all worked hard to make their class the best ever.

What is a school without a student voice? To answer, the Fall and Spring Senates were important to the basic function to the school year. Without them, students would not have a way to express their opinions.

LEADERS OF THE PACK

Spring Leadership Leads the Way

With the spring semester came a new leadership class which took over the duties of fall leadership by planning various activities to boost school spirit and pride.

One of their first projects was a Valentine's Day Dance that took on the theme of "Very Special." Planned by SICC, the dance was still a "raging" success despite the fact that it was raining rather hard on that Friday night.

Other highlights of spring leadership included the Body Building Assembly, the Student Pride and Appreciation Days (SPAD), and taking care of next semester's elections, which included the voting for cheerleaders, song leaders, class officers, ASB officers, appointive offices, and class members.

Of course, being in leadership not only gave students a voice in the planning of school activities, but it also taught them how the school functioned and how to make it a better place to be.

PEP CLUB'S REBIRTH

Putting The Punch Back Into Pride

Off to a super and spirited beginning, the newly found Pep Club was created this year. Three peppy girls, Selicia Lacey (captain), Heidi Munoz, and Sheri Hall with the help of senior Segaro Bozart, were responsible for starting this exuberent club. "I was only there for support and to help them get started. After that, they were on their own," Bozart said. When they first passed around a signup sheet to their friends, 50 students were ready to be spirited Gauchos - a great start.

Cheering in the bleachers with the cheerleaders, they started out only as a Basketball Pep Club. But, after all the excitement, they decided to be an All-around Pep Club for all sporting events, lifting school spirit, and motivating the teams to win.

Made not only for cheering, consisting of mostly girls, they raised money to do something special for the basketball players. They raised funds by selling Le Pop suckers.

In the beginning, they did not have a sponsor so they were not a club yet. Luckily, Mrs. Rittger decided to volunteer as Pep Club sponsor. "I was so impressed by the initiative taken by Selicia Lacey, Sheri Hall, and Heidi Munoz and especially Segaro Bozart that I let myself be persuaded. Besides I like basketball!," Mrs. Rittger said.

FIRING IT UP

Twirling Their Way To A Productive Year

An important part of half time entertainment, Rifles did their best to arouse the fans while the football teams were in the locker room.

Though only a rookie team, they got off to a good start. This was apparent in their accomplishment of making it to the pre-lims in December at Wilson High School. They were also honored with the invitation to march in the Martin Luther King Parade in Gardena on January 18.

Junior Lillian Kay, a member of the Rifles, summed up the year in her own words: "I'll admit it was very hard work, but it was all worth it. I'm very proud of what we have accomplished."

Perfect timing and precision counted with the Rifles, but the thing that kept them going was the perfect teamwork. Without that, they would have seemed like a bike without wheels - the team would not have gone anywhere, but of course, they went far.

During a home football game, junior Kelly Luino gracefully twirls her rifle to the beat of the music from the band.

Comprised of students, faculty, administrators, and parents, the AB-65 School Site Council was responsible for developing a school improvement plan.

One of the ways they did this was to use the money the school acquired from the CAP fund - over ninety-thousand dollars - wherever it was needed. Computers for foreign language and drafting classes and money needed to repair the C-Building wall by Room C1 were where some of the funds went.

A big improvement was made in the sports program. The exponent system was scrapped, having a major impact on the track, football, and basketball teams. This meant that people interested in trying out for a certain team could still make it, based on their abilities, and not their height, weight, or age.

Reviewing the school budget, senior Farrah Joudi, junior Edwin Tobias, senior Frank Herrera, and senior LaKinya Allen decide where funds should be distributed.

IT'S ALL IN THE WRIST

Small Flags Keep Growing Stronger

Half time would not have been the same if it were not for the spirit and showmanship of the small flags. Being a unit of the band, the small flags not only dazzled spectators at the game, but also impressed the judges at competition.

At Hibbard's Camp, the small flags showed enough razzle-dazzle to come away with three prizes; second place-double flags; second place - single flag; and second place - most spirited team. Also while at camp, the small flags got to meet and exchange ideas with teams from a number of different schools.

Much of the team's success on the field and in competition was due to their noticeable effort and discipline. Every day, the "flaggies" could be seen perfecting their moves or creating new routines. Captain Lisa Lozo kept the team working together, ensuring that they would perform as a unit.

This was only the second year that the team used double flags, which makes their achievements seem only more impressive. As the small flags continue to grow stronger, the school's pride in them can only grow stronger as well.

WAVING THE WAY

Tall Flags Catch the Spirit

Maneuvering flags six feet tall while still maintaining grace and poise, the tall flags helped to heigthen half time spirits. Their enthusiasm was reflected in their performances, with a sense of pride and effort one could not help but notice.

This pride was the main source from which the tall flags derived their energy. Captain Kristine Campion and co-captain Katie Meredith took control of their team's energy and turned it into clean and polished routines.

With a large squad of 18 people, the captains, had more to worry about than in the past. After all, it is always harder to keep a large group in unison than it is to keep a small group in unison. But the tall flags didn't let their size get in the way. Conversely, they took advantage of their size, performing new moves and routines.

Putting hard work and pride on their side, the tall flags added irrepressible zest and enthusiasm to every half time performance.

MARCHING IN TUNE

Never Missing A Beat

Although seventy-five trombones may have been missing, the marching Gauchos still managed to move the crowd. The Gauchos may have not marched down the streets of River City, but big parades were not absent as when the band performed at the Gardena Parade - a tribute to Martin Luther King Jr. Even though they weren't led by the Music Man, but rather by the "music woman," drum major Shaun Amimoto, the crowd at the football games didn't seem to mind. When Amimoto stuck up the band, a hush would fall over the crowd, and the band would perform.

"Being a member of the band takes a lot of hard work and relies on school spirit," claimed junior Ruthie Stone. There were 38 such dedicated members of the band, who, under the direction of Mrs. Herman, practiced many grueling hours of marching, drills, and music practices. Along with their group practice, these extraordinary students practiced their techniques alone in their spare time. It was this dedication and sacrifice of free time that kept the band marching in mint condition.

Trumpet player Dee Dimitro pratices his technique.

DRILL TEAM'S AT WORK

Just Marching Away

While school let out at three o'clock for most students, the school day for a drill team member did not end until four-thirty or five o'clock. Endless as it seemed, their practicing prepared them for each Friday's half-time performance. Before marching on the field, a new routine was made up by the girls, the captains, and the sponsor, Mrs. Ammirato. These routines were created at numerous after school practices and many fifth period class hours.

Because of peer constructive criticism, they learned to work together as a team - the key word. Even though the team was large, they stuck together. Doubling its size from last year, they gained the power and quality to go to the Band/Drill Team Preliminaries and acquire top scores. "Overall, I was impressed and excited with the way this season was and I'm looking forward to the next one," said Captain Kim Dukes.

INSIGHTING AWARENESS

Reaching Out To Reality

Some people often wondered what New Life Club was. To find out, they only had to attend a weekly meeting in Room Q6 every Thursday at lunch.

Dozens of students gathered there to discuss their own personal views on current issues. But the approach to this was different; issues were approached as they related to the Bible.

Many came to find out more about religion and life. Discussions covered social subjects like abortion, dating, peer pressure, and drugs. Basically, they did studies to get a better view on things, trying to make themselves better Christians. They also studied how God affected and changed their lives.

No matter what they talked about, it was all for the better, encouraging positive attitudes for the club members.

OUT OF THE SPOTLIGHT

Stage Crew Shines With Hard Work

Even though they didn't sing, dance, or act for the audience, Stage Crew was still an essential part of any show. It was they who were responsible for the lights, sounds, and special effects that helped make a performance that much better.

One might think that their job was only to switch buttons on and off or to give a turn of the knob here and there, but there was much more to it than that. They had to make sure a spotlight shined on a performer at a precise moment, control the amount of light on a stage at any given moment, or any one of their numerous jobs.

All of their hard work payed off in the end, though. Their involvement with so many important events like the Miss Lomita Pageant, Senior Parents' Reception, and numerous dance assemblies taught them to be responsible and gave them a sense of pride in a job well done.

PAST RECORDINGS ...

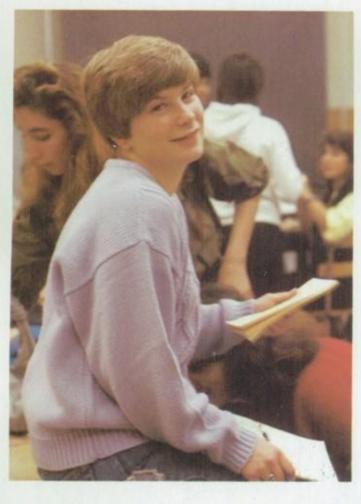

All in the Family

Some people may think that being at school at twelve o'clock midnight was not only crazy but also stupid! For the yearbook staff, this was not an unheard of task. Yearbook was not only a sixth period class but also a job that extended to many hours after school.

This extra time encouraged all the staff members to be a close knit group and to form lasting relationships with fellow students that would otherwise not have existed. If these people were uncompatible, the results would be extremely evident in the final product - the yearbook.

All work and no play make yearbook a dull place to stay. Besides their regular classroom projects, yearbook also went on trips, like going to the park for a picnic or going out to dinner with fellow staffers. This enhanced the friendships; therefore, the students were more compatible during the class.

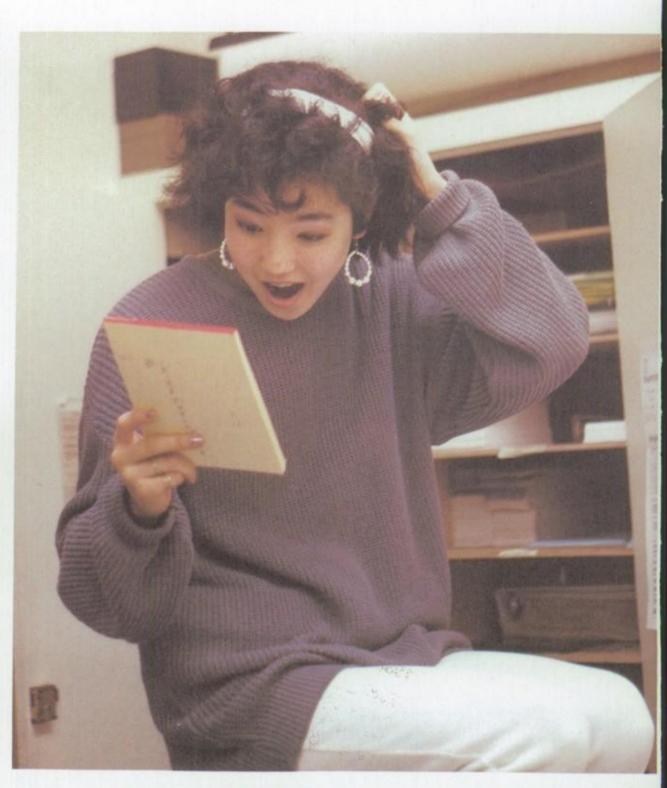

With the closeness and all the time spent together, the yearbook staff became one big happy family.

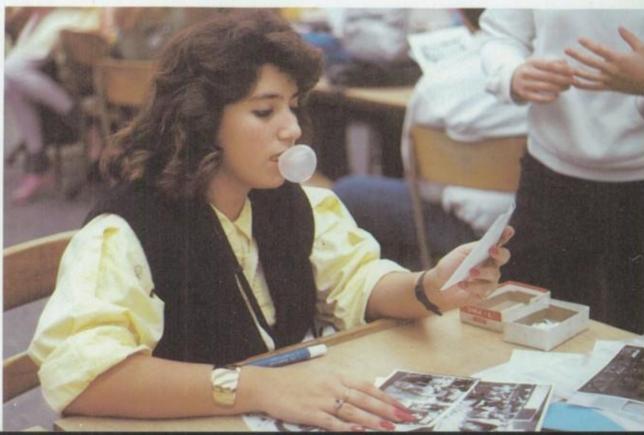

"Omigod! That's sooo scary!!" exclaims assistant editor Jeri Yoshizu after counting her characters, realizing she is one thousand characters over.

With a big smile across her face, editor Chris Miller glows with happiness after completing the final layout of the deadline.

"Who says you can't work and chew gum at the same time?" is the attitude of photographer Diane Garcia as she picks a group photo for the layout staff.

PRESENT REPORTINGS

Poised Under Pressure

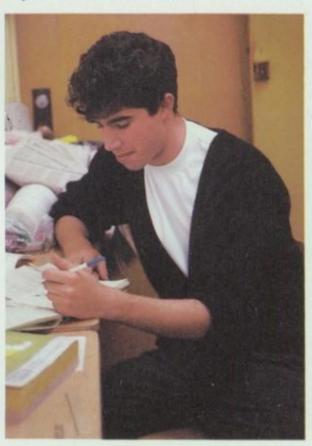

"The most obvious thing about the Green and Gold Staff is that we all unite in our ideas. Even though we have our differences, we make them clear and do something about them so we can work as a team," explained co-Feature Editor, Monica Sandowicz.

Working well together, that is, being able to compromise and communicate with others, was important to the Green and Gold Staff in assembling and providing the student body with a weekly newspaper. They covered school and community news, exercised leadership through their editorials, and relaxed by reviewing movies.

Some of the staff's most memorable articles included their article on the AIDS epidemics in schools, the soccer team's victorious season, and the humorous article on Homecoming and anxieties.

This quality communication produced quality work. The staff, guided by advisor Mrs. Rittger, defended its two sweepstakes trophies, won in local competitions, took third place at the state journalism convention in San Jose, during the weekend of October 25, and placed second at the Greater Los Angeles Press Club write-off.

Gaining more than just tangible awards the staff developed many lasting friendships, and experienced valuable lessons.

Going for perfection, the Editor-in-chief, senior Ceres Corbin, makes sure the page is straight.

"Look, Lindal This is how you do it!" exclaims Junior Natalie Masson to Linda Sung while she shows her how to straighten a letter.

A WORLD OF PEACE

SACSI Brings it out in the Open

With the hope of gaining insight and solutions to the problems in the world around them, the Student Advisory Committee on Student Intergration (SACSI) met once a week in 07 to discuss their feelings. Sponsored by Mrs. Hill, the club intended to help students gain a better understanding of the different people and situations they faced each day.

Discussing such topics as sexual harassment, rape, and prejudice, the students were given a chance to learn from opinions of their peers. The students in SACSI also worked on improving their self-images.

At the conference held at the Pilgrim Pines in the San Bernadino Mountains, the students from SACSI joined together in mind-broadening discussions and exercises. "The level of involvement this year shows the interest and caring attitudes of people in comunication and understanding of each other," said senior and president Lianne Urada.

By working together, the members of SACSI developed a better understanding of both themselves and of those around them.

Discussing how their values and cultures affect their relationships with other people are sophomore Bernadette Carolipio, senior Liza Hipolito, and sophomore Patricia Peres.

MERE FUN FOR SOME

For the Science Fiction Club - A Part of Life

Rather than letting themselves get bogged down in the stressful world of adolescence, the members of the Science Fiction Club escaped once a week into the boundless regions of their imaginations. Reviewing movies, books, comics, or anything else pertaining to science fiction, the club openly discussed their opinions and interpretations of both new and old sci-fi works.

Even though the club got off to a late start, because of their sponsor's Mr. Lehn, back injury, the second semester resumed with a burst of enthusiasm. The members went avidly back to their pursuit of fun and fantasy.

There were no real requirements to become a member of the Science Fiction Club. but one did have to have a certain kind of "unique" personality. Science Fiction provided a means of entertainment for these people, as well as a way of life.

OUTSTANDING KEYS

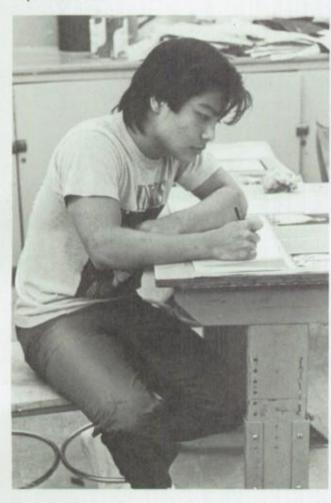

Caring . . . Our Way Of Life

Dedicated to helping others in the school and community, Key Club was a major club on campus, undertaking many worthwhile projects.

Key Club provided countless hours of service to the school and community. One of their biggest projects was the Christmas Basket Drive, where the student body and the community all joined efforts to bring a brighter Christmas to under-privileged families. Other projects included visiting senior citizens, California Special Olympics, the faculty luncheon, and numerous others.

The members also learned to work together, striving for the same cause - to help people. With the satisfaction of helping others as their only reward, Caring truly was their way of life.

Putting in plenty of effort and time in to their projects, the members were rewarded with awards at their yearly conventions, making it a top rate club.

REACHING OUT

Service From the Heart

Not only was Keywanettes a social club bringing together high school teenage girls, but it was also a nationwide service club. Both individually and collectively, the Cal-Nev-Ha Keywanettes uniquely served both school and community through various projects. For the school, Keywanettes worked regularly at the switchboard, counseling office, registration and locker clearance. In the community, members visited the elderly in convalescent homes, worked at Special Olympics and 10-K runs, helped decorate the Kiwanis International rose float, and participated at the Lomita fairs.

Furthermore, from volunteering and participating in both school and community events, the individual member gained a background of experiences and personal assets. "Being in Keywanettes has definitely broadened my horizons and given me invaluable experiences," senior and 3 year member Lianne Urada commented. Through the diverse assortment of projects, members had gained an insight to the different kinds of people in this society, such as autistic children and elderly people.

"Being in Keywanettes has given me the opportunity to meet many new and very interesting people. That alone, I feel, was worth all my work and effort," explained Allison Uchida, spring Keywanette President.

WHAT'S NEW?

The New People on Campus

What is RSP? Resource Specialist Program. This was a program to assist students with an exceptional need. Whenever there was work that could not be done in class, the students went to the resource room and worked with their sponsor-teacher, Mrs. Goulbourne. "The students got very individualized help, there was various amounts of students in each of my classes," said Mrs. Goulbourne.

Not only did Mrs. Goulbourne have to have teaching credentials to teach this class, but she had to go through a little more schooling to acquire a Resource Specialist Certificate.

Mrs. Goulbourne chose to teach the RSP classes for a few reasons. "I feel as though I'm giving help where the need is greatest," she explained, "I also think of it as a challenge."

In the RSP classes, the students basically learned how to follow directions and important study skills. When a student has learned to study and their grades go up, they become more motivated to learn. Mrs. Goulbourne commented, "I get the feeling that the kids realize I'm trying to motivate them, push their self-confidence up, and keep all of their hopes high."

From year to year, the Special Education department has spent most of their time helping students graduate and achieve their future goals.

OUR NEWEST ADDITION TO THE ADMINISTRATIVE STAFF

Assistant Principal Mary Fennessey

For most people, moving to a new school might be difficult, but not for our newest Assistant Principal Mary Fennessey. "In some ways it's easier because most of the pre-planning of events was started and I just had to follow through with the balance." she said.

the balance," she said.

Being new here, she claimed that everyone, faculty and students, were very friendly and helpful. "I haven't felt uncomfortable one bit," she explained.

Realizing that setting goals is important, Fennessey looked ahead to becoming acquainted with the staff and the student body. Also she looked forward to being more familiar with the programs and clubs that exist on campus.

One of her first priorities was academics, although she believed that extra-curricular activities were also important. She explained, "I believe in an even balance between extra-curricular and academics. If a student studies for four hours, I would love to see him or her shoot a basket or two."

Enthusiastic and vivacious, Mary Fennessey was a welcomed asset to the school.

LENDING A HAND

Nursing Helps out at Bay Harbor Hospital

Nursing is not just a class, but an opportunity to learn all of the skills to become a certified nursing assistant.

The first purpose of this class is to explore the field of nursing and to see if those enrolled are interested in medicine. The second is to train and prepare the students for employment in the complex field of medicine. Those who are interested in a job relating to nursing are required to take a state exam in order to obtain a license for employment. "Almost all of my students have a job," explained nursing instructor, Mrs. Palmquist.

Every school week, the students spent four hours in a double-period class, learning and practicing nursing skills and studying about different types of diseases. During the six hours, the students practice what they have been taught at the Golden Ages Convalescent Home and at Kaiser Permanente.

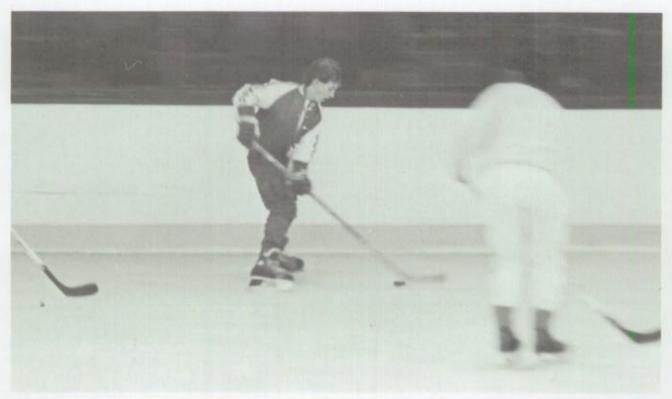

There were a few specific requirements for this class. First, the students were required to wear their hair up. Second, they had to have proper uniform. If they could not afford to buy a uniform, the PTSA had a financial aid program that would help with the costs. "They had to look like professionals in every way possible," said nursing instructor Mrs. Palmquist.

Making sure that Lincoln doesn't get the ball is Varsity player Marty Ward. Ready to pass the football is quarterback Carlos Vega. Keeping the ball away from Hollywood is Chuns Yu.

Trying to imagine this school without sports is like imagining a car without wheels. Not only do spectators benefit by getting a kick out of watching the thrill of victory and the agony of defeat, but the players also find their lives changed forever.

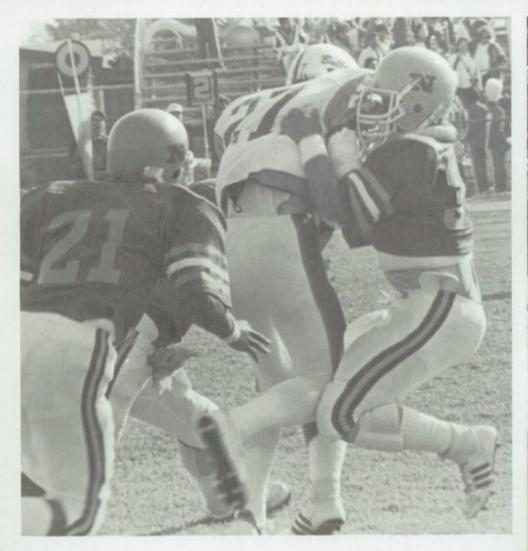

With such a wide range to choose from, students have the opportunity to participate in many sports during their six semester stay. From football to tennis to volleyball to basketball and even track, there is almost nothing one cannot do.

Almost 50 percent of the pupils have been on at least one team throughout their life on campus. Ask anyone of them about their experience and surely, the answer will be a positive one.

Of course few students are forced to dropout of teams because of the ineligibility rule. But the ones who stuck to it, learned the meaning of teamwork, and responsibilility, those are the leaders of tomorrow, and the idols of today.

THE POWER HOUSE

Packs A Punch

Though the Varsity football players had adapted to Coach Haley, who was only in his second year of coaching Varsity football, the team still had many kinks to iron out. The team's size deficit, lack of unity, and the "C"-average/No Fails rule were some of the many problems that plagued Varsity football. Though they had much potential, Varsity still did not manage to live up to their reputations as the "Mighty Gauchos."

Losing many of its key players with the graduating class of 85, Varsity only managed to finish this season with an identical record to its 1984-85 season, which was two wins and seven losses.

Despite starting quarterback Carlos Vega's feelings that the teamwork that is so valuable to any team

"There's a lot more dedication and enthusiasm this year,"

just did not seem to thrive within the Varsity players - one of the reasons behind their dissappointing season.,

It was only a couple of seasons ago (83-84) that Varsity football had made it to the play-offs and semifinals, but for now, all they could do is the look forward to next season.

There weren't just cheerleaders at the games to boost crowd spirit, but Small Flags also joins in the noise making, as shown by seniors Cheryl Uchima and Lisa Lozo and junior Jodi Judd.

THEY ALL FALL HARD

The Game's the Same, Regardless of Size

Not quite as big as the Varsity team, yet working just as hard, the "Killer Bees" gave the season their best shot. With eight losses and one tie, the Bees' season was not as fruitful as the team or spectators had hoped it would be.

The team was not hurt greatly by the no fail/"C" average rule, but it was weakened by inexperience. Consisting of nearly thirty-five sophomores, one junior, and four seniors, the majority of players had a lot to learn.

According to quarterback Paul Hammer, the coaches, Kucher and Blankenship, did their best, but the team just needed more discipline. "As soon as we got behind, we just gave up," said Hammer.

Overall, the Bee Football team has learned from its mistakes and hopes to improve through time and experience.

SPREAD THE WORD

Dream Team is in the House

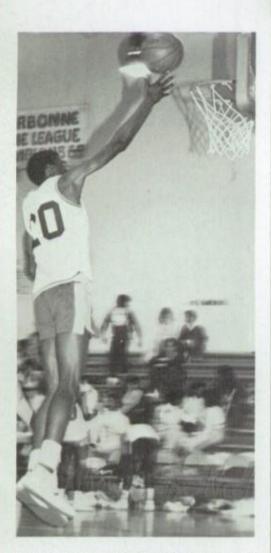

With a new name, a new pep club, and a new sense of pride, the Varsity basketball team started the season off fresh.

The "Dream Team" worked hard at practice before the season even started and continued to improve with each and every game. A definite factor in the team's success was the unrelenting support of their fans. Sparked by the creation of an all new pep club, flocks of spectators in "Dream Team" sweatshirts were at every game to cheer their team on to victory.

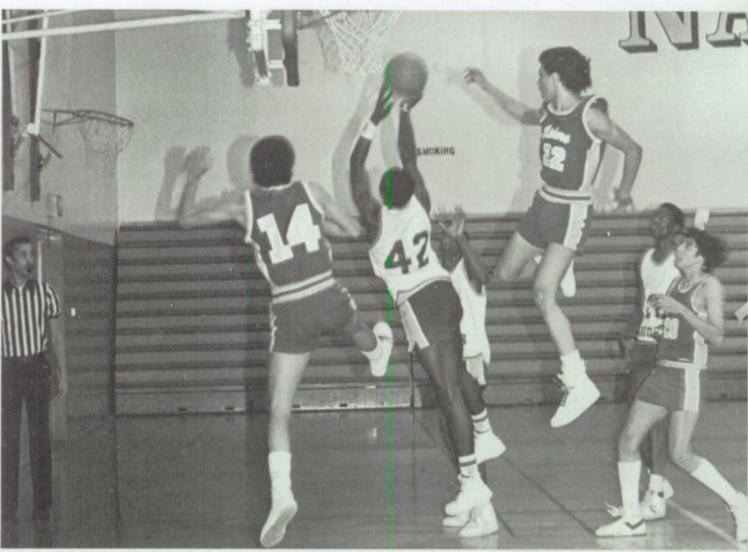

Moreover, the members of the Varsity team worked together - one unit pushing toward a common goal. With the help of Coach Backstrom, the players were able to resist making stars of themselves and instead to concentrate on scoring as a team.

In the end, their hard work proved worthwhile. With a season record of 6-4, the Varsity basketball team made it to the play-offs - an accomplishment everyone was willing to cheer about.

With opponents swarming around him, Marty Ward goes for a tough two points.

HOOPING IT UP

... To An Exciting Season

Despite the fact that the J.V. team consisted of mostly first year players, they still managed to pull off a good season by making it to the playoffs.

Of the four losses they had, two were extremely close - two and one point losses - which made their record even more impressive.

Just as impressive is how they came back in many games after being behind by a significant number of points. For example, in their first two pre-league games against Roosevelt and Huntington Park, the J.V. team had half as many points as their opponents after the first quarter, but still managed to win by many points.

This just goes to show that their teamwork worked well and gave the season much excitement.

In the first J.V. game against South Gate, Deshon Andrews closely guards a Ram forward.

After being fouled, $Jim\ Kim$ takes one of his free throw shots \cdot a point that helped with the close Gaucho victory over Lincoln in a pre-league game.

SHOOTING STARS

Teamwork - Key To The Season

Because the Bee/Cee basketball teams were comprised of mostly new players, Coach Hoppes stressed fundamentals during practices, hoping to bring them to their maximum potential. He motivated the players well as they gained incentive in long hard hours of practice.

The two teams started out with many difficulties. They lost valuable practice time when administrative officials debated whether they would play as a Freshman/Sophomore team or the usual Bee/Cee teams. Also, many prospective players were lost, due to other interests. Despite these difficulties, the teams kept their spirits high and strove on to fight.

Teamwork was the key to this battle. The new team learned valuable plays and strategies from Coach Hoppes to be used later in the games. Since the team was new and somewhat unfamiliar with each other, working together was sometimes difficult. However, with the leadership abilities of Bobby Ryono, Aron Kaay and Scott Ogata, who often played together on weekends, the Bee team often stood out. An example of this was in the Gardena Game when Ryono scored 26 points. On the Cee team Charlie Lofthouse and Ron Seiter were the leaders, Lofthouse scoring 21 points in the second Banning game.

With hard work in long practice hours and enthusiasm, the Bee and Cee teams kept the fight strong throughout their season.

ON THE RUN

No Time to Rest

Both the Varsity and J.V. Cross Country teams enjoyed a successful season. Under the coaching of Mr. McQueen, the Varsity team placed second in league and went on to the City Finals, while the J.V. team placed third in league and went as far as the City Semi-Finals. "This was the best all around season in years," said Coach McQueen.

Led by Carlos Moya, who re-

"This was the best all around season in years"

mained undefeated throughout the season, the Varsity team won almost every match, losing only once to San Pedro in League play. However, the Gauchos came back and defeated the Pirates in the City Semi-Finals.

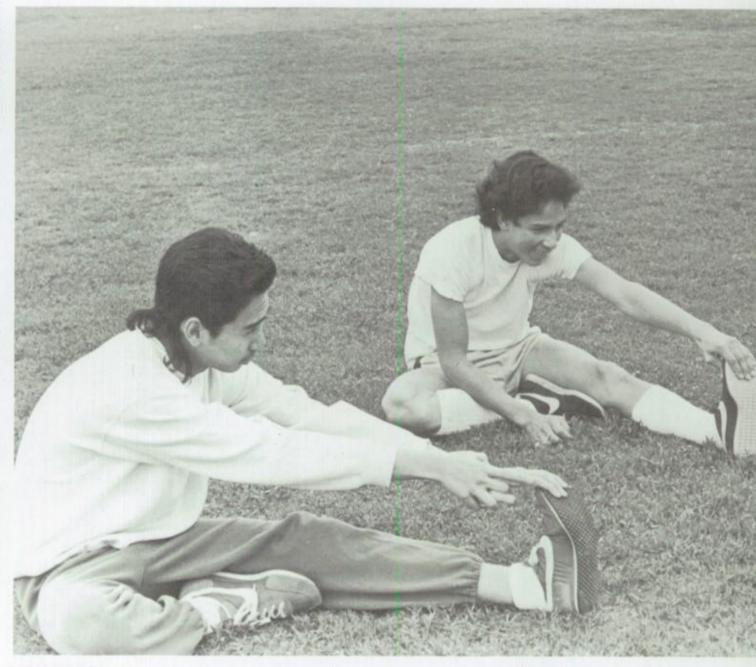

Considering the shortage of runners, the J.V. team did quite well. Dien Lee made it to the City Finals as an individual, and Steve Sipos was not far behind.

Practicing after school each day and Friday mornings, both teams put forward their best efforts in preparing for their competitions each Thursday at Peck Park. The three mile course they raced on consisted of sand, rocks, steep hills, and valleys.

Despite their achievements, both teams remained optimistic of their future meets.

Stretching their muscles, Glenn Wong and Jaime Flores prepare for a meet.

"Warm-up is a necessity before running," Dien Lee remarks.

Running a couple warm-up rounds are Carlos Moya, Richard Knight, Dien Lee, Richard Bell, Carlos Rodriguez and Mark Bruno.

"Just one more mile before the finish line," thinks Mark Salsman as he nears his final turn.

Girls' Volleyball Works Their Way Ahead

With twice as many girls as last year, Girls' Volleyball was off to a great start. Their new coach, Mr. Clark said, "Because we had so many girls on the two teams, each girl helped another to improve her bumping, setting, and serving."

Many of the Varsity girls were on last year's team and were more experienced then the newly found JV players. Varsity setter, Tricia Fujino said, "When we started, each girl on both teams had a great deal of potential, but not much skills. With the help of Paul Morigaki (JV coach), all of us (Varsity) assisted the JVs at practices to improve their games."

Even though both teams didn't do as well as expected they all look forward to next year. JV Co-Captain, Devita Taylor said, "Next year we'll be in a different league and I hope we get off to a great start."

Two exceptional Varsity players were Chris Dombrowski "Most Valuable" and Kim Petersen "Most Improved". Two outstanding JV players were Eileen Ebanen "Most Valuable" and Linda Sung "Most Improved".

Overall, the spirit and teamwork of both teams were overwhelming.

Making sure the ball gets over the net is setter Tricia Fujino.

OUT TO WIN

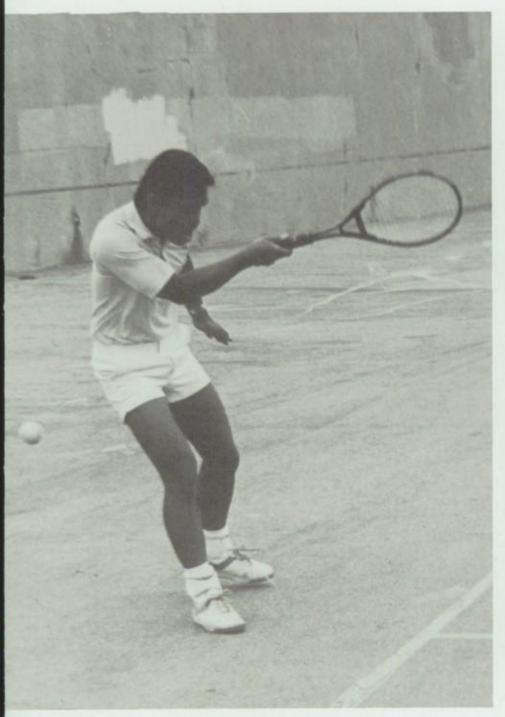

Boys Tennis Swings to the Top

Practice makes perfect. Practicing two or more hours a day, the tennis team, with the assistance of Coach Guinn, worked hard on improving their basic ball control hitting techniques, while planning court strategy. After warm-ups preparing for interscholastic competitions, the team divided up into pairs and challenged each other to simulated matches. Those who perfected their techniques and coordination of footwork, hitting strokes, and timing were the better competitors and most successful players.

The team consisted of mostly new and determined players, who played aggressively at every match. Players like Monaheui Anesi, Wade Downey, and Sung Chung made it difficult for their opponents to score without a fight. However, the nine key returning players, Larry Woo, Roman Castaneda, Bang Nguyen, Lyle Downey, Elden Doloroso, Sun Kim, Maurice Martin, Minh Ta, and Jason Bunch were the back bone of the team, capturing many wins. "Although the players were young and for the most part, inexperienced, they had a competitive, successful year, as well as a fun year," said Coach Guinn.

"There goes the ball," says junior Sun Kim as he prepares for a second serve.

"Ah, missed it again!" says senior Rommel Embisan.

Warming up for the match against Gardena is sophomore Wilfredo Untalan.

THE BEST RETURN

Girls' Tennis Creates a Racket

The girls' tennis team made good use of the tennis courts with frequent practices during the week.

The girls practiced in several tournaments and played two games against each school: Carson, Banning, Gardena and Washington. Twenty players from all grades took part in the matches. "This year, our team was unexperienced in doubles, but strong in singles," explained Coach Kordones. Kelly Kovach was the most experienced in singles, while Martha Flores and Stella Anesi were the most experienced in doubles.

A great growth in skill and tactics were displayed as they played their matches with much enthusiasm and spirit. The team voted Kovach as most valuable player, Eren Cervantes as most improved player, and Nancy Hayashibara as most inspirational.

Even though they had a tough season, they ended up with 3rd place in league competition.

Placing in the League Championships

The soccer team developed a winning combination, making it to the city playoffs and finally tying San Pedro for the regional championship for the first time in 2 years. "This year was surely an improvement from the team's previous year," commented Coach Murrieta on his team's outstanding accomplishments.

This season began with a strong match against Birmingham, and from then on, fate took its course. Lead by the 5 returning players, Steve Schimmel, Orlando Jimenez, Arturo Tamayo, Luis Bautista and Na Lee Moua, the team was on a roll, winning many of its games, except for 3 losses to Hollywood, Jefferson, and Belmont and 2 ties to San Pedro and Banning.

Coupled by team spirit and competition, all the long hours of workout were reward by the victorious season.

Varsity and Junior Varsity Strike 'Em Out practicing, Girls Varsity and Junior Varsity softball worked hard to be outstanding this season. To start the season, varsity pitcher Shanni Izumoto shut out Palos Verdes, encouraging enthusiasm on the team. As promised by Coach Clark, "I told the girls that when they played a shutout game, I'd let them shave my mustache." The day

After many hours of vigorous following that invigorating game, a team of extremely happy girls shaved off Coach Clark's mustache in the circle area. There was more to winning than mustaches! RUN WITH THE WIND

Varsity Track is on the GO

Comprised of a good group of sprinters, field eventers and even more impressive long-distance team, Varsity track gave the other schools in the Marine league an abundance of tough competition.

When asked how Varsity compared with other schools in their league, senior Chris Yoxsiner said, "When it comes to short distances and field events, our best records are comparable to those of other leading schools like Carson and Banning, but at the long - distance events, we have an edge over them. Mainly because of Carlos Moya, probably our most valuable player.

Beside Moya, Varsity had other very strong runners such as Dien Le, Treven Sims, Dwight Sims, and Marvin Clark. All of these leading runners inspired the rest of their teammates to try even harder. Of course, this inspiration payed off in the end - Varsity track continued their winning tradition.

Because of the many activities occuring at the meet, seniors Carlos Walker, Segaro Bozart, and Mike Lassiter and junior Marty Ward all watch a different event.

GREAT BEGINNINGS

Bee and Cee Track, Off to a Fast Start

This semester, the old cliche, "Like father, like son!" could be applied to the Bee and Cee track teams - "Like Varsity, like Bee and Cee!"

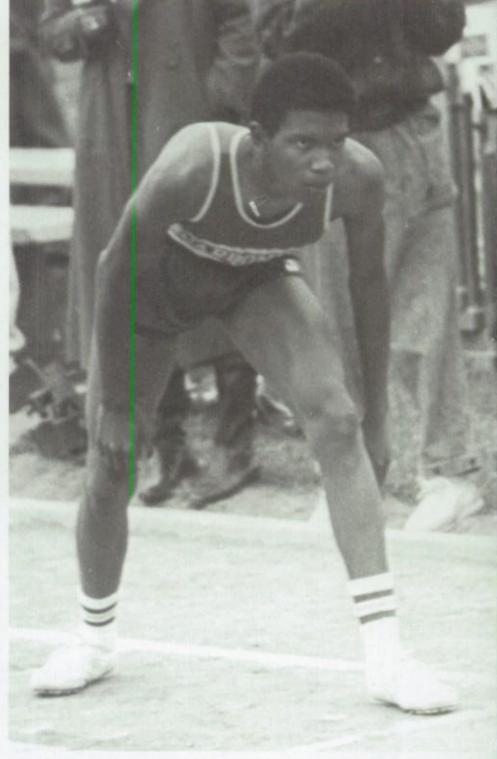

Like Varsity, both the Bees and Cees had a particularly strong team. The Bees benefited from a large group of returning juniors. These juniors, with their needed experience, worked well together again to produce a victorious team. What the Cees lacked in experience; however they made up in skill. Comprised of particularly fast sophomores, the Cee team also had a good season like the Bee and Varsity teams.

Even though the competitors in both of the Bees and Cees had a main goal of someday making it to Varsity, all were still satisfied with their outstanding season.

BURING TRACKS

Sugar 'N' Spice and Everything Nice

Although girls are made of sugar and spice, the Girls' Track team had an extra dose of spice. The Girls' Track team had an almost equal amount of returning girls and fresh talent, as they rose to new heights.

The girls competed in events such as hurdles, dashes, long jump, high jump, and shot put. With many strong competitors, the team shot to a skyscraping beginning, placing high in the early and invitational meets. This strength remained throughout the season.

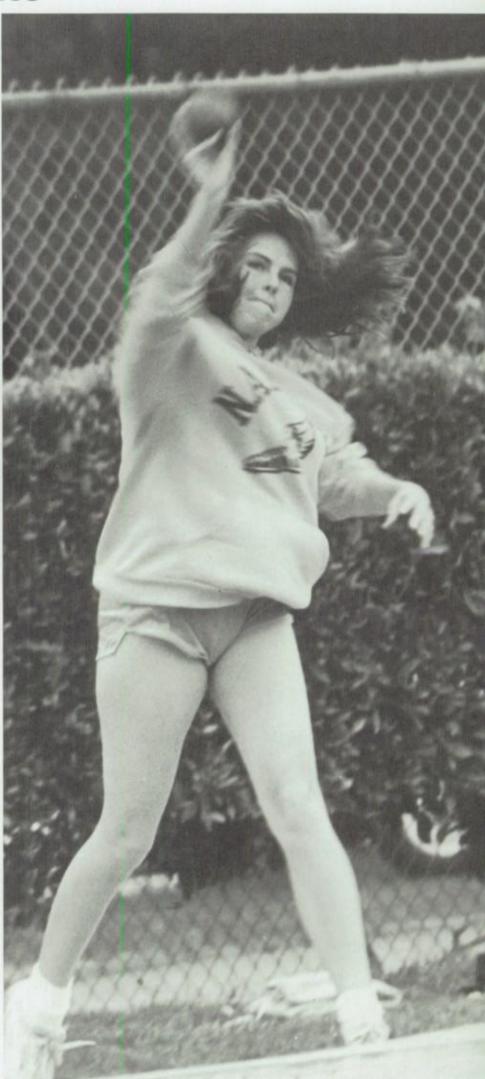

This energy also transferred to other areas. Although pole vaulting was not an official event, senior Haru Mills became the first girl to pole vault for the Gauchos. Even though she exhibitioned, Mills began a tradition, a presedent for future years.

The Girls' Track team strove for excellence, with power and determination, they proved that they were not truly ordinary people.

At the Westchester track meet, Angela Mingle gives her all during the shot put competition.

Only a neck ahead of senior Holly Valenzuela, Junior Natalie Masson stretches for the finish line.

With one lap to go in the two mile run, senior Michelle Trumpler gives it her all.

Heading for the finish line, junior Laurie Johnson leads the pack toward victory.

STARTING OVER

Retiring to the Good Life

After thirty-five years of teaching the visually handicapped twenty-two of those years at Narbonne, Mr. Taylor looked forward to retiring in June. Although Mr. Taylor was an asset to Narbonne's visually handicapped program, it was time for him to move on and to broaden his horizons.

"I would like to do some different things in life," said Mr. Taylor, the father of four dauthers and a son. Thinking of moving to a remote area, Mr. Taylor also plans on attending a community college to take piano lessons, and on traveling to various places within the United States and to different countries throughout the world. "I would especially like to travel to Austria to visit my wife's place of birth," said Mr. Taylor.

Since graduating from pepperdine University and earning a Masters Degree in Teaching from the Los Angeles State University, Mr. Taylor has worked at other schools, including Pomona High School, Edison Jr. High School, Manual Arts, Gardena High School, and Washington High School. According to Mr. Taylor, teaching has not only provided him with steady employment, but it has also given him personal satisfaction. From teaching, he has gained the opportunity to associate with many people, both adults and teenagers. He has watched outstanding students, like Muhammad Kareem, reach their full potential and achieve success in a visual world. Teaching the visually handicapped has brought unforgettable rewards, both in self-satisfaction and in friendships.

Teaching - showing or helping one to learn how to do something was what Mr. Mogil did best. Retaining high standards of teaching Mr. Mogil taught United States history, including the Advanced Placement U.S. history class. Out of all his students who took the AP test, most passed, scoring higher than the National average. "I have met a need here, and now, it is time to apply my abilities in other areas," said Mr. Mogil.

After 30 years of teaching, 23 years of which were here, Mr. Mogil looked forward to retirement in June upon the final sale of his house. Hoping to find a house in Carlsbad, California, he planned on living a slower pace of life. There, he would like to do voluntary service in hospitals and to work with shut-ins and senior citizens.

Although teaching had a positive effect on his life, Mr. Mogil decided to dedicate his retirement years to help his community.

SENIORS

Seniors were all in Mint Condition. It was their last grueling year, but they still came out with honor and prestige.

Throughout the years, no high school had ever been without seniors, those so-called mature young adults who behaved like they lived on high horses. But who could blame them? For two long years, they had been pressured by peers, tortured with tests, and stuck with studies. Finally, in their last year, they had a right to be exactly the way they were. Without senior egos, school life would cease to exist. Who always shouted the loudest at games to boost the morale? Seniors. Who gave pride to parents at graduation? Seniors. And, who left behind the traditions that will last forever? Yes, they were the seniors.

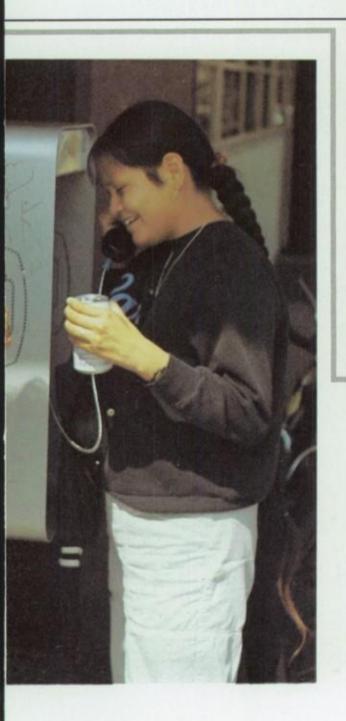

That did not mean the juniors and sophomores were not important. They were, of course, the future seniors. They, too, would have their time to shine.

As graduation approached, our seniors had good things to look forward to, but some were not as fortunate. While others were going to parties and planning for college, the rest looked toward the future with a sudden anxiety. Grades were low. Finals approached quicker than they assumed. Would they graduate or be held back? What would happen after the Big Day? The future often appeared shaky and dim. Whole lifetimes were ahead of them, and changes and crucial decisions followed. Seniors have long received whatever they deserved, good or bad.

In their final year, seniors were the top. But, after graduation, they had to start all over, being the bottom of the totem pole. Once again, they would have to be treated like sophomores, being pushed around and having no authority.

The seniors, a class above the rest, stood out in the crowd, not only because of the grade they were in, but also because of what they represented and how they did it. Seniors were, and are, our future.

In frustration, senior Craig McCoy pounds on the apple machine in an effort to retrieve his coin.

Communicating with home is sometimes necessary for senior Verlinda James.

THE WRITE STYLE

Not all students are expert calligraphers, but there is always at least one exception; Grace Liu is that exception in this case. Since the seventh grade, Liu has been a self-teaching calligrapher, taking up her interests from magazines, books and a friend's mother, who knew how to do the lettering how to do the lettering.

Setting her sights in becoming a commercial artist or going into graphic design, Liu felt knowing and improving her calligraphy and going into other areas of art, such as texturized drawing and designing motifs, will help her to achieve her career goal. She has already put some of her artistic abilities to practice by writing church programs, making handouts, and drawing for poems in the literary magazine, "Captured Images."

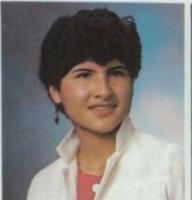

With high goals set, numerous hours of working and studying ahead of her, Liu anticipates an interesting artistic career.

SKETCHING OUT THE FUTURE

Watch out Jim "Garfield" Davis, here comes Glenn Wong. This cross-country and track team member became interested in drawing when he started looking at comic books.

Since first discovering his talent at age eight, Wong has graduated from just a student in afterschool art classes to cartoonist for the Green and Gold.

"I've always known I was going to be a comic artist," said Wong.

To perfect his skills, Wong has taken painting, life drawing, art history, design crafts, and photography all at Narbonne. He has also taken advertising and life drawing at Pasadena Arts Center.

Wong has decided to pursue art as a career, not a hobby. In the future, he plans to go to Long Beach State, then on to the Pasadena Arts Center for further studies.

FREE-FALL OF DEATH

Ten-thousand feet and nowhere to go but down, senior Lesley Fritz risked it all by parachuting out of an airplane to "overcome my fear of heights." Talk about extremes!

When she was seven and lived in Illinois, Fritz used to watch teams of parachuters floating to the ground. Ever since, she had been curious about the sport. She had her chance to go for her dream in the summer of '84. After seven straight hours of ground level procedures, Fritz went directly to the top. "When it was time to jump, I was scared to death, and that isn't an exaggeration."

When asked to describe her experience, Fritz was speechless. Finally, after a prolonged silence, she said, "Well, just put it this way: it feels like throwing yourself to your death, but knowing that you'll live."

PRO SURFERS OF THE FUTURE

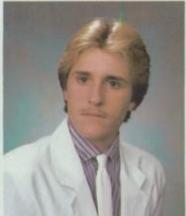

Either strolling down by the breakwall in Hermosa Beach, or passing through the avenues of Redondo, one saw seniors Derek Rubio and Pat Santanelles putting their power into their surf. Anytime between 2 PM and 7 PM after school, if the swells were good, they would be sure to be riding the waves.

For the past seven years, Santanelles has been a dedicated surfer. He was inspired by his brother, who also gave him his own board. "My future goal is to join the Coast Guard, which will obviously keep me close to the water," he commented.

As for Rubio, in action for five years, he was self-inspired but mentioned that his surfing idol is pro Shawn Tomson. He has also entered several local contests, making him proud of his performance.

In commenting about the concept of surfing, they looked at each other with big grins, and as if rehearsed before, they said, "Surfing is the only life. The only life for us."

THINKING OF THE FUTURE

"If one has the will, anything can be done," This motto was Haru Mills' key to success in her academic and social lives.

As a scholar, Mills had to decide on her priorities and budget her time accordingly. With the encouragement from her relatives and friends, Mills set high academic goals. Excelling in academics, Mills commented, "You have to study to do well in college." Since the entrance standards of USC are competitive, she worked hard in maintaining her high grades. In her senior year she enrolled in three advanced placement classes, AP Calculus, AP Biology and AP Composition.

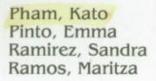

Between her heavy academic schedule Mills took time out to run to keep in shape. For two years she has been a dedicated member of the cross-country team. During the 1985 summer games Mills placed second in the 800 meter writing short stories, and reading.

Mills' hobbies were drawing life portraits,

Thinking of the future, Mills has decided to become an electrical engineer.

ACCORDINGLY CREATIVE

The halls of the administration building are decorated with the work of artistically talented students. One of these talented people is Michelle Arthur.

Inspired by her grandmother, Arthur drew simple pictures as a child. Beginning with sketches of animals, she developed her talents to draw people and design posters.

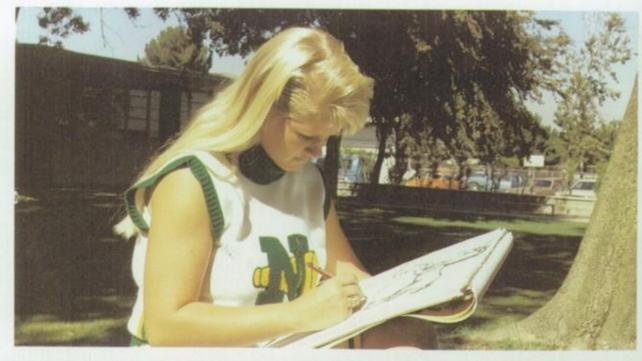

To further sharpen her skills, Arthur took several art classes, including painting, life drawing and AP Art History, all of which have worked for her benefit. She was nominated for the American Institute of Foreign Studies and has taken second place in the PTSA poster contest.

Arthur has also excelled in other fields, such as cheerleading, drill team, and student government. She has reached beyond her present goals and has begun to work on her future. When asked her future plans, she smiled and replied, "I want to study in Europe and become a commercial artist."

HUGGYBEAR SOFTWARE

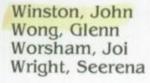

The world of computers has grown immensely during the past few decades - so much that it has become a necessary part of everyday life.

This is especially obvious in the field of home computers. Everyone from the student to the housewife has found ways to adapt to these high-tech machines. Because of the great demand for computers, many people have developed an interest in this profitable market. One of these people is senior David Bainbridge.

Having been interested in computers for the past few years, Bainbridge considers it more than a hobby - a total committment he pursues as a career. He has planned to major in Information and Computer Science when he attends college. Next, he plans to open his very own capital shop that offers computer-related services and supplies — a more realistic version of his perspective company, Huggybear Software.

"Computers have definitely been a major part of my life and will be a major part of my future."

SENIOR-ITIS

A mind-boggling disease that affects seniors is senioritis. Seniors are most susceptible during the last semester of their senior year. Their symptoms are: extreme lethargy, resulting in poor grades, sleepiness in all afternoon classes, tardiness to first period and a general disregard for school property.

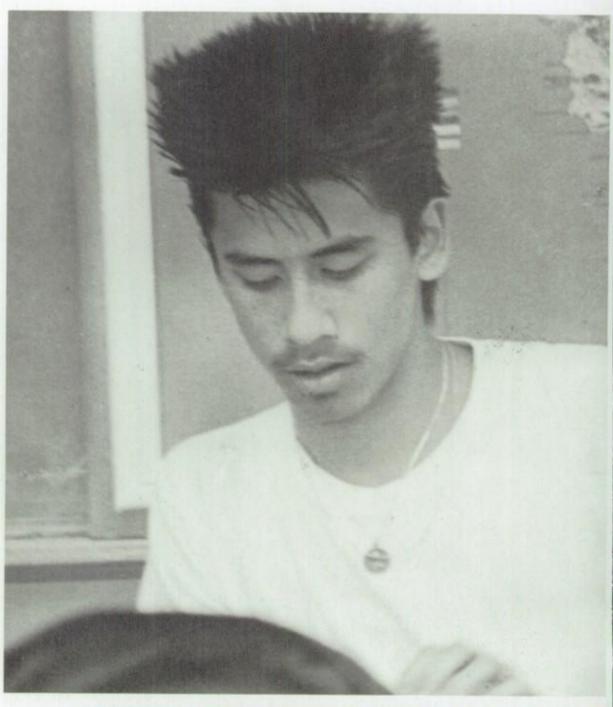

What is the cure? Long talks with school administrators, threats of violence or failing grades by irate teachers? . . . Graduation is the only cure.

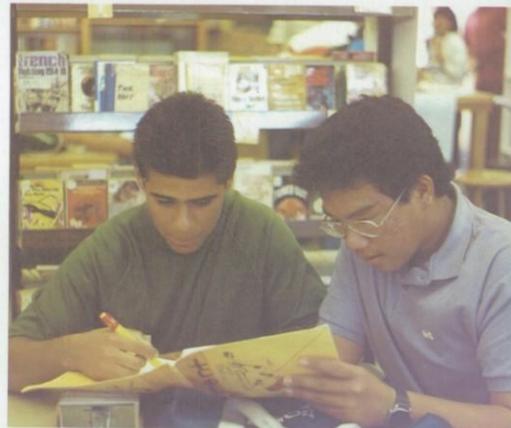

Spending their time wisely, John D'Nofrio and Jeff Lewis study for an upcoming exam.

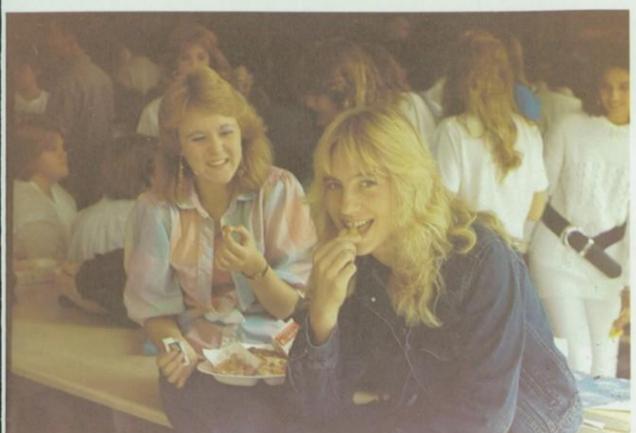

Even with their hectic senior schedules, Rennee Paxton, Reuna Talavera, Wesley Fritz and Jrei Yoshizu find time to mess around during lunch.

SACSI members Lianne Urada and Liza Hippilito demonstrate their endless friendship during lunch.

"Look at that thing crawling across the table!" exclaims Claudia Camargo to best friend Rosa Morales.

Lunch is the height of activity for Carrie Ann Conoley and Paula Blackburn.

GRADUATION THE TIME HAS COME

After twelve years of schooling, life beyond graduation can be a frightening thought. With the whole of their adult life lying ahead of them, seniors are faced with a myriad of decisions that must be made by June, for every idle moment after that is a moment wasted.

For some people, graduation is the turning point in their life - the point where the full time student turns to the full time employee. For others, it is a mere stepping stone along the road to a higher education. Either way, graduation means more responsibility.

Even though seniors may choose to go their different ways after graduation, all will share in the feeling of accomplishment. Twelve years may be a long time to dedicate to one's endeavors, but as Eternity - the class of '86 - will soon find out, a lifetime is even longer.

THE CLASS OF '86

ETERNITY

Yes, this was the Class of '86. There wasn't a time or place where this group of seniors would ever be the same. These faces were the yesterdays and todays, and hopefully the tomorrows. Someday, when it is time to look back, here's wishing that every single Narbonne Gaucho of the Class of Eternity remembers the good memories and not the bad.

And, as the years pass by, thoughts about what ever happened to them will remain a big mystery. Who knows? There was no doubt that they were a part of an Eternity.

"PUMPING IRON" PART III

The Muscle Exhibition

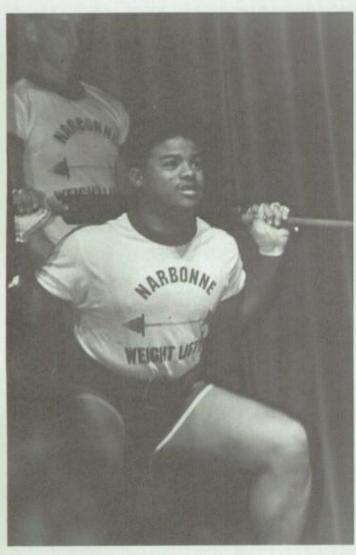

For the third year, Mr. Blinn sponsored a body-building exhibition displaying a good outlook on fitness and health. As an added attraction, although Mr. Hultz had people from his weighttraining class show different lifting techniques, this was the first time eleven male students posed for the school.

Together with five competing men and a woman, the amateur posers each had a minute routine to exhibit their physique.

"I was nervous, but the crowd made me feel good" Senior Mark Somers.

The high school bodybuilders were as follows: Bobby Burns, David Chavez, Billy Coleman, Michael Johnston, Wendell Lahoz, Joe Murillo, David Peace, John Ramierez, Mark Somers, Kevin Westfall, and Everett Winslow.

To show his squat techniques, senior Perris Clark takes a deep breath before he goes.

As the crowd cheers on, professional body-builder Corey Moore smiles with satisfaction.

With precision and grace, professional body-builder Jenny Moore tries to satisfy the audience with one of her many poses.

Showing his "pecs," junior David Chavez grins confidently as he hears a roar from the crowd.

For this pose, Dave Brown flexes his arms to show off his broad chest muscles.

LIKE ALL THINGS ...

... The Year Must Come To An End

As the end of the year drew closer, Gauchos became excited with anticipation. For most students, it was anticipation of the 'sizzlin' summer ahead. Sophomores and juniors also wondered what the rest of their years in high school would bring, but for the seniors, there was a whole new life ahead of them - adulthood.

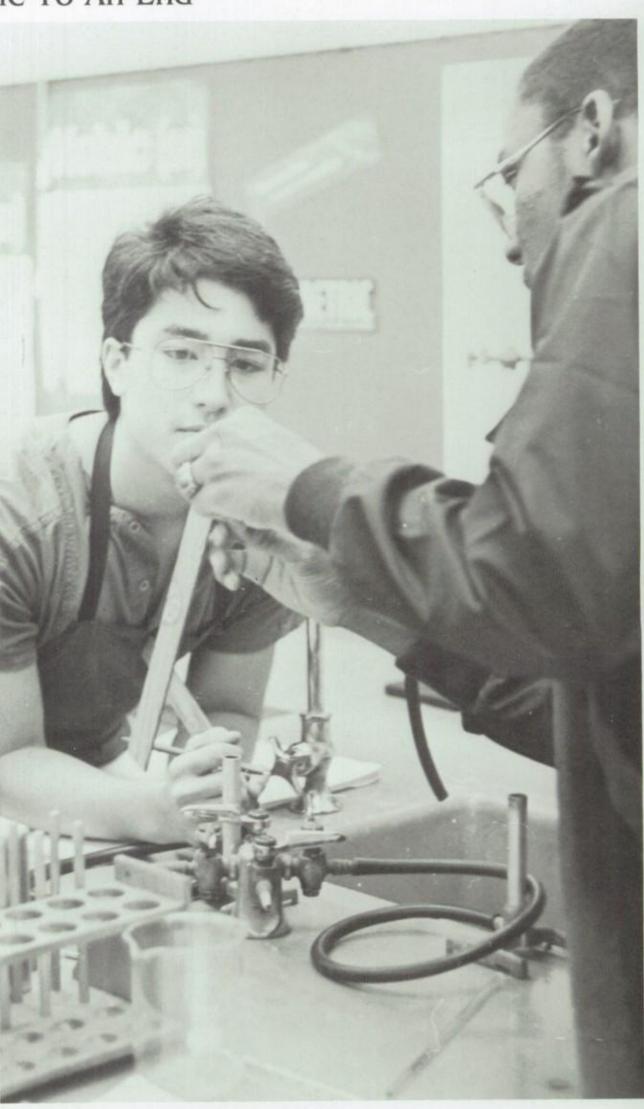

And for all the Gauchos, there were mixed feelings throughout the air. Some were happy that school was finally out for the year; they would now be able to stay out later and to sleep in. Others, especially the seniors, however, were slightly sad, seeing most of their friends for the last time.

But whether one felt happy or sad, the overall feelings for most students was one of joy. The end of the year meant a time to rejoice the good memories of the past year and to look forward to even brighter future days ahead.

As the school year ends, buddies Robert Lenke and Jason Mauricio say farewell until next year.

During the last chemistry lab of the year, junior Devin Ishida pays close attention to earn the maximum points possible.

Sophomores $Bianca\ Thomka$ and Junior $Edwin\ Tobias$ cheer on as their teacher finishes his last lecture of the year.

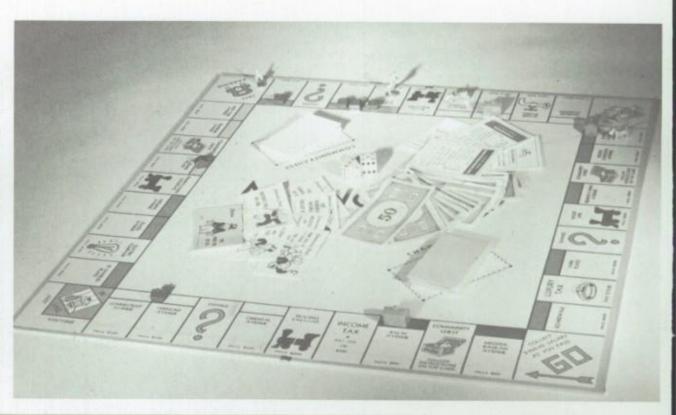

Though the end of school is fastly approaching, a group of Gauchos still think Narbonne is number one.

Even though he is not returning as co - editor of the Green and Gold, senior Corey Albert goes over the list of candidates for next year's staff.

Advertisements found on the following pages are companies which truly exhibit and openly display community support and admiration. This support, in the form of advertising dollars, allows for the highest quality and best possible production of the yearbook. In addition to these highly spirited companies, special recognition should be accorded to certain individuals and school service organizations who also advertise in the yearbook. These special interest groups and individuals include, not only formal organizations, such as, Keywanettes and congratulatory parental ads, but also a composite of student purchased "crazy ads." We urge the student body, teachers, staff, and parents to support these very special companies and organizations in the same spirited manner in which they support the community. This mutual support and admiration will assure the preservation and continuation of our community in the best possible mint condition.

ASSOCIATION

2034-2035 WORLD CHAMPIONS To all of our friends who made this year the most memorable, we love you all very much! And we hope that all of your dreams come true, just as some of ours came true besides you. Because there's no happier hour than an hour with a friend, so we're telling all of you that our love for you won't ever end.

Love ya all, Brenda Makepeace (Rivas) America Carbonell Elena Carbonell

Can you believe it? Another year is over! Thanks, Kris, for all the laughs and the tears. Without you, life would be dull. Good luck in the future. Justin, take care! David, no matter what happened, I'll never forget the good times or the love we shared.

Good luck & lotsa love, Michelle

P.S. What a stud! Hole me back! L.I.S.H.

To all my friends who stuck with me throughout the years, thanks so much for being there for me when times were hard and for making my senior year the most memorable. Rene, where did you go? Farrah, Amy, and Dean, you are the best! Sherilyn, we've been through so much in the past; I hope we stay friends forever. And to Susie, the kid next door with all the boy problems, some day, we'll both be married and have 101 kids.

Luv, Karen

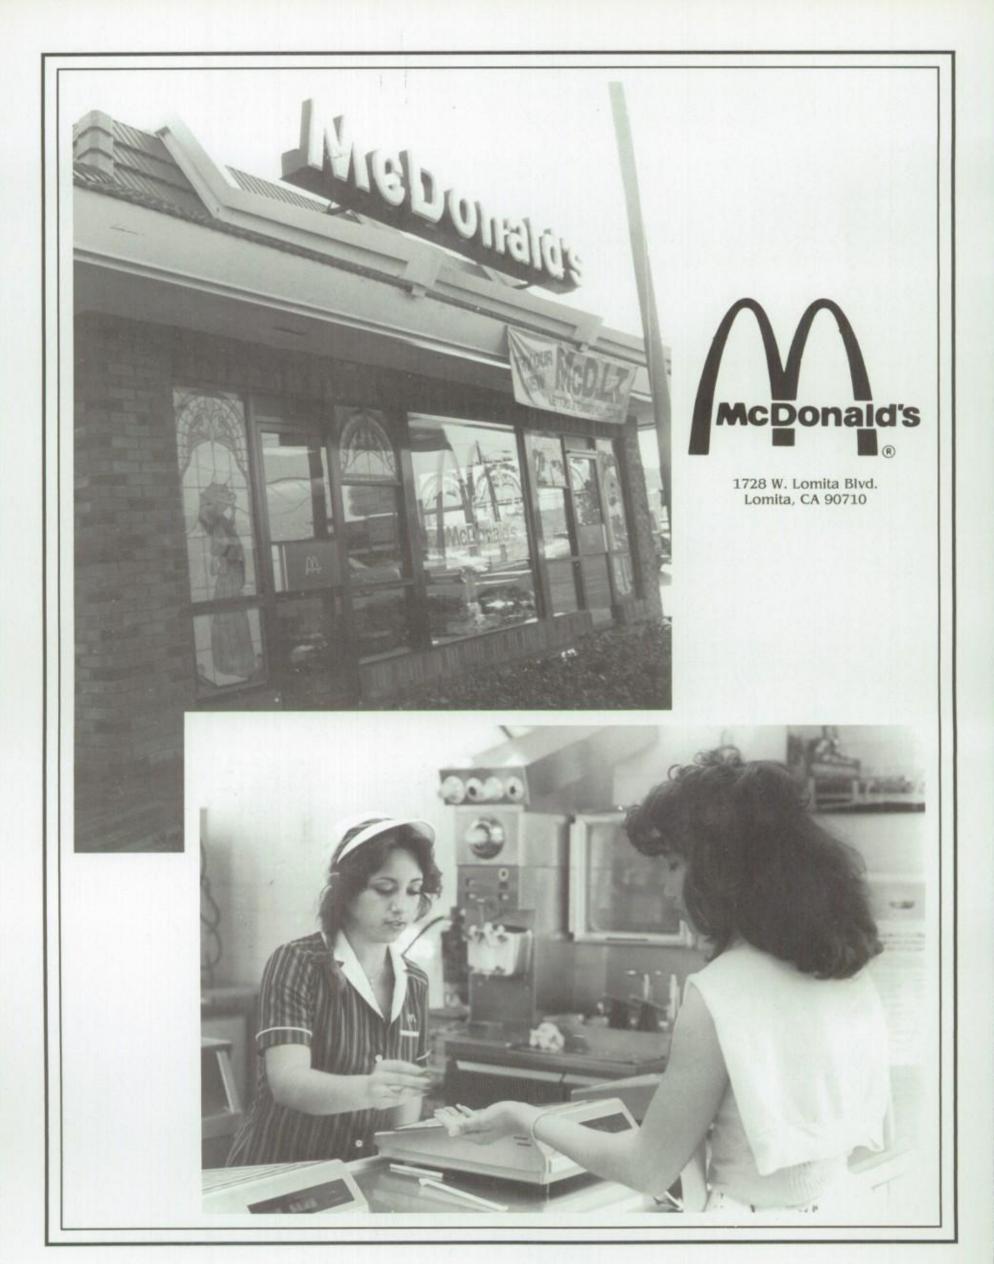

To Susan Y., May, Susan W., Ruth, Rachel, Cheng-Hung, Wen, Elizabeth, Michelle, Yvonne, Jimmy, John, Charlie, Wen, George . . . I'll miss you all. Have fun next year and good luck everyone!

Someone crazy enough to buy a crazy ad for all of ya, Jennifer

Dianne, it's been wonderful having you in yearbook! Photo editor, you are the most spectacular, wonderful editor anyone could have! Michelle, when you get cold, your body is "thermochemically" losing heat! Mr. Talley-dignified, a true intellectual, a man of stature - these were but a few of the qualities of our advisor!

Standing on the edge of the quay
No light flashes on the water for me
Fog in my mind darkens my eyes
Silently screaming for a distant sound
... Ripple river yellow
Rising for a breath of breeding and downs
Stillness overcomes me in the night
Listen to the rising water moan
I'm waiting for the night boat ...
Dedicated to SMM from TN
P.S. Yes, CM, I'm still obsessed with her!

The electrifying excitement of the basketball team thrills sophomores Alicia Reynolds and Marlene Washington.

Messing around as usual, Emie Paulson, Renee Paxton, John Holeman, David Chavez, Reina Talavera, and Curt Cambert take time out to be together during lunch.

Kimosabe says, "Who is that masked man?"

Two very good friends, seniors Ronnie Alliniece and Carlos Walker show their trust in each other with a special handshake.

Looking rather "cool" and "hip," senior Craig McCoy and junior Scott Raymond show off their fashionable clothes.

IN MEMORIAM

Mr. Leland Andersen 1943-1985

Recently transferred in 1984 from Fleming Junior High School, Mr. Leland Andersen was an instructor in the Agriculture department and was the sponsor for Future Farmers of America.

Andersen taught his students the basics of vegetation, agriculture, and the caring of their animals. He also sponsored them when they attended fairs and entered their animals in contests and competitions.

FFA attended a state competition in San Luis Obispo from April 29 through May 2 at California State Polytechnical College. After taking a break from the competition, 1984 graduate Chris Dobbins was driving Andersen and himself to Andersen's hog farm in Dinuba, California. On May 1, 1985, as they were driving through the San Joaquin Valley at midnight, a car suddenly appeared on the road and there was an accident. When Andersen was thrown from the car, he died on the scene.

The El Eco Staff sincerely dedicates this message and picture to Mr. Leland Andersen.
